Germany Now Will Consider Paying Debt If Invading Armies Removed, Says Berlin Report.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Bastrop, La., March 15.—No indictments were returned by the Morehouse parish grand jury in connection with the slaying of Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard on August 24 last and various hooded band activities, which the jury has been investigating for the past ten days.

The jury's report was given to District Judge Fred Odum late today.

In the report the jury referred to the masked band case as "the deplorable crime of August 24," and stated that while it had gone thoroughly into the affair it could find no evidence that would warrant the indictment of any individuals.

Not Sufficient Evidence.

As to the deplorable crime of August 24, 1922, when five men were kidnapped on the highway of Morehouse parish, we have carefully considered all the evidence brought before this grand jury as to the activities of masked and hooded men," the report states in part. "The majority of this body are of the opinion that the evidence furnished was not sufficient to warrant the finding of true bills against any particular party."

"As to reports published in certain newspapers that friction has developed between the grand jury and the attorney general and his assistants we wish to brand same as absolutely false and unfounded. The relations between the individual members of this grand jury and the attorney general and his staff have at all times been pleasant and harmonious."

Seven Minor Bills.

"Some 125 witnesses have been examined during the session and we have inquired into all matters reported to us, having returned seven true bills on matters arising from the mob cases. We find little law violation except in the case of those district attorneys who have already filed bills of information."

Attorney General Cocco and George Guion, assistant, left Bastrop today prior to the grand jury's report. Mr. Guion said it was not likely that Mr. Cocco would have any statement to make as to the grand jury's report.

Senator Howard Warren, of Shreveport, special counsel for the state in the Mer Rouge cases, was present when the report was filed, but left immediately for Shreveport without issuing any statement.

HADDOCK RESIGNS AS G. M. C. HEAD

Will Open Boys' School in Atlanta Next September—Bright Future Seen for Milledgeville School.

Colonel J. N. Haddock, president of the Georgia Military College, Milledgeville, has tendered his resignation to the officials at that school, and has come to Atlanta to make preliminary plans for the opening of a boys' private school here in September.

The new school will be known as the Haddock School for Boys, and will be located on the north side, on a site to be chosen later. It will be non-military, and will have its schedule so arranged as to devote individual attention to each student, Colonel Haddock said.

"I took over the Georgia Military College some time ago, and at the time of my resignation," he stated, "the school was running smoothly, the morale excellent, and showed great promise for the new year."

"The new school," Colonel Haddock said, "is to be the realization of years of contemplation, and I hope to make it an asset to the city of Atlanta."

The opening gun in the new city administration's determined and relentless war on reckless driving, speeding, and other traffic violations in Atlanta was fired Thursday afternoon when the special councilmanic traffic committee laid down a series of heavy penalties for violations of these ordinances which will receive consideration of general council at its regular session next Monday.

Persons convicted of reckless driving, speeding or passing a standing street car stopped to let off and take on passengers, will receive punishment as follows, providing the recommendations of the committee are ratified by council: First offense, $25 or 30 days in the stockade; second offense, $50 or 30 days, either or both in the discretion of the recorder; third offense, $100 or 30 days, either or both, and all offenses after the third, $100 and 30 days.

Turns to Be Banned.

At its same session the committee adopted a series of regulations relating to right and left hand turns on principal streets in the congested area which includes all territory embraced by Cain street, on the north; Trinity avenue, on south; Spring on west, and Central avenue on east. All right and left hand turns are prohibited at Five Points and at Whitehall and Alabama streets with the exception of south bound traffic on Peachtree street which can make a right hand turn at Marietta street, according to the committee's recommendations.

No turns, either right or left will be permitted at Whitehall and Alabama; Alabama and Whitehall; Peachtree and Decatur; Decatur and Peachtree; Peachtree and Edgewood; Edgewood and Peachtree, and Marietta at Peachtree street. Under the recommendations no left turns can be made at Whitehall and Hunter streets; Peachtree and Auburn avenue; Peachtree and Pryor (for Carnegie Way traffic); James at Peachtree; Poplar at Peachtree, and Peachtree at Marietta.

BOY NEAR DEATH AFTER ACCIDENT

Charles Sweeting Taken to Grady Hospital After Being Knocked Down by Heavy Motor Truck.

Charles Sweeting, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Sweeting, 265 Courtland street, lies at the point of death in the Grady hospital from injuries received at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon when knocked down by a heavy motor truck. Surgeons at the hospital stated that the boy received a fractured skull, in addition to other injuries.

The driver of the truck, Roy Withrow, who lives on a rural route, was arrested under charges of reckless driving by Call Officers W. F. Bullard and R. E. Carroll, who investigated the accident.

The boy was injured on Courtland street at Baker, the truck striking him as he started to cross Courtland.

Two other accidents in which automobiles figured Thursday resulted in injuries to Mrs. Grace Easterling, 475 Washington street, and Mrs. W. S. Gaston, 254 Lucile avenue.

Mrs. Gaston was knocked down by a heavy truck thrown off the rear wheel of a motor truck driven by a negro, R. A. Williams. The accident occurred at Forsyth and Hunter streets Thursday morning. Mrs. Gaston was knocked down and bruised about the head and back.

Mrs. Easterling was knocked down by an automobile after it collided with another car at Mitchell and Whitehall street. The machine that injured Mrs. Easterling was operated by a negro, Melvin Hollis. She refused to go to the hospital, and is under the care of her family physician.

Howard Wilmer, 16, of 30 Kivv street, was badly bruised and cut when struck by a lamp on the white way truck at Houston and Pryor streets, when it was blown off by the wind about 9 o'clock Thursday morning. After treatment in a nearby drug store, he resumed his work of selling flowers.

SEVERAL BELIEVED KILLED IN STORM

Scores Reported Injured When Elements Play Havoc in Mississippi. Much Property Damaged.

Memphis, Tenn., March 15.—Several persons are reported to have been killed and nearly two score injured in a wind storm which swept half a dozen towns and farming settlements in northern Mississippi late today, apparently taking its heaviest toll in the village of Savage, where virtually every building which weathered the tornado which struck that town two months ago was either destroyed or badly damaged.

About twenty-five persons are reported injured at Savage and two were blown into the Cold Water river with the wreckage of their homes. One of the injured at Savage, John Kerr, a merchant, was reported in a critical condition late tonight. The others are not believed seriously hurt.

Four negro farm hands were reported killed near Lambert. Property damage but no casualties is said to have occurred at Sardis and Herndon.

Relief parties left Crenshaw tonight for Savage.

Wire communication with the area over which the storm passed is cut off and, up to a late hour tonight, meagre reports brought to neighboring towns by messengers and train crews furnished the only information available.

SWISS DAIRYMEN MAY SETTLE HERE

Negotiations for Colony of Farmers Opened Between Georgia Association and Swiss Association.

Negotiations that may result in bringing a colony of Swiss dairy farmers to Georgia have been opened between W. H. Abbott, secretary of the Georgia association, and the secretary of the Swiss dairy association for colonization, it was announced by Mr. Abbott Thursday on his return to Atlanta from a tour through south Georgia.

The opening of negotiations, Mr. Abbott stated, is a result of the association's activities in introducing Georgia to visitors at the farm bureau convention here in November, 1921. H. Bretscher, secretary of the Swiss Milk Producers' association, was a delegate to the convention and while here was the guest of the Georgia association on a tour of south Georgia. He was much impressed with the possibilities offered by the section for supporting an extensive dairy industry and since his return to Switzerland has been corresponding with Mr. Abbott.

"I have written the colonization secretary that Swiss experienced in dairying can find ample opportunity for profitable work in cheese and butter-making here in Georgia. They will be assisted in getting started by Georgians familiar with the work and will find a ready spirit of co-operation on the part of Georgia bankers and business men. Should we be successful in closing negotiations to bring a colony of Swiss to Georgia, the colony would probably include laborers, tenant farmers and a number of men of sufficient capital to purchase farms and stock their own."

Mr. Abbott expressed himself as much pleased with the outlook for carrying forward the Georgia association's land settlement program.

Atlantans Can See 7 Aces in Action At Lyric Theater

Second Radio Orchestra in America Puts on Act This Week.

All of today and Saturday regular listeners in Atlanta to Station WGM, The Atlanta Constitution, will have the opportunity to hear Warner's Seven Aces, The Atlanta Constitution orchestra, in action.

The Aces constitute a special added attraction on the Lyric theater bill for the last half of this week and were given enthusiastic receptions by yesterday's audiences.

Those kinds of Atlanta people have heard Warner's Seven Aces by radio, but have never heard them in person. The appearance of the Aces at Keith's Lyric theater means that these same thousands can for two more days now watch the Aces and listen to their dance music as they play at the Lyric.

Under the direction of Byron H. Warner, the Aces have become a leading southern dance orchestra. Incidentally the Aces last July became the second regular radio orchestra in America, the first having been the Detroit News orchestra which is heard every evening from Station WWJ, Detroit.

At the Lyric this week the Aces are presenting their latest numbers in their act.

POISONED RICE KILLS OVER SCORE IN CHINESE CITY

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Shanghai, March 15.—Twenty-seven students and teachers at the normal school at Hangchow are dead and ten more are in a precarious condition as the result of eating rice saturated with poison by two discharged cooks, according to evidence at the official investigation today.

Chemists said enough poison had been placed there to wipe out the entire community.

Following the serving of the rice Saturday night 200 students and fifty teachers became violently ill, of whom 27 since have died.

BEAVERS HEARING TO BEGIN TODAY IN SUPERIOR COURT

Both sides to the litigation between Chief of Police James L. Beavers and the police committee of council Thursday afternoon announced readiness to begin the hearing on the readjustment and injunction proceedings, pending in Fulton superior court, at 9:30 o'clock this morning before Judge George L. Bell.

The hearing was originally set for Thursday morning but was deferred owing to the death of Attorney Luther Z. Rossier, out of respect for whom the courts have been adjourned since Tuesday.

George C. Spence, attorney for Chief Beavers, will fight efforts of the police committee to try the official for incompetency because, he contends, members of the committee have already reached a verdict that he is inefficient.

settlement negotiations. The general line of the industrial argument, according to this French authority, is that while it is all very well for statesmen in the repose of government offices in Berlin to say "resist" it is a different matter for those who are resisting and must suffer permanent economic losses and possibly total disaster.

GERMANY ASKS REMOVAL OF TROOPS.

Berlin, March 15.—It was reliably stated tonight that complete and unconditional evacuation of the Ruhr will be designated by Germany as a prerequisite to the resumption of reparations payments and deliveries in kind under the program to be agreed upon when negotiations with the French and Belgians are resumed.

This is the crux of the German official position as announced in connection with the current rumors in respect to possible early inauguration of negotiations either directly with France or through the mediation of a third party.

Although neither Chancellor Cuno nor Foreign Minister von Rosenberg have as yet given the German attitude precise formulation, the reichstag leaders and Berlin newspaper editors have been definitely appraised that the government will name this condition as the obvious prelude to any forthcoming negotiations for fixing Germany's reparations obligations and incidentally settling the Ruhr conflict.

People Back Plan.

In assuming this attitude the government is convinced that it has the undivided backing of the German people, who, it believes, would not tolerate for a moment any adjustment failing to designate unconditional evacuation as a starting point for negotiations.

The suggestion that the occupying forces be withdrawn by successive stages or that the occupation be restricted to zones is dismissed in official as well as reichstag quarters as being wholly outside the realm of serious consideration.

"The presence of even restricted forces of occupation," said one of the leaders of the socialist party, "would be a constant reminder of the ten weeks of terror to which the Ruhr workers have been subjected and would also constitute a permanent basis of friction."

He believed that if the Ruhr mines, smelters and coke ovens were to yield the maximum required to carry out the reparations demands, it was imperative that no affront be afforded the German workers.

"This would be the case," he continued, "if they were given a daily reminder in the form of foreign bayonets and other militaristic oppression. No practical purpose would be served, especially as the mischief already wrought will fester among all classes of the Westphalian populace for a long time to come."

WOMAN GETS LIFE IN MURDER CASE

Prisoner Who Gave Poison to Husband Shows No Emotion When Sentence Passed.

Aberdeen, Miss., March 15.—Mrs. Hugh Morris, on trial here for the murder of her husband by poisoning, was sentenced late today to life imprisonment after the jury had brought in a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree.

Listening to pronouncement of sentence by Judge C. P. Long, Mrs. Morris stood without showing emotion while her four small daughters clung crying to her skirts.

Morris died the night of December 19 last. One witness testified that Mrs. Morris asked him to poison her husband. Another asserted on the stand that the defendant had told her that she had asked a man to poison her husband.

Mrs. Morris stoutly denied all allegations of the state's witnesses. An appeal will be taken.

Mrs. Morris is the first woman ever convicted of murder in Monroe county.

Harding to Start Northward Cruise Early Next Week

President Plans to Stop Over in Augusta, Ga., En Route to Capital.

Miami, Fla., March 15.—All prepared for deep sea fishing, President Harding tonight was at Cocolobo Cay, a small island about 25 miles south of Miami. Whether the president will be able tomorrow to vary his vacation trip by trying to land a barracuda, an amberjack, or a king fish, appeared to depend on the weather. A steady northeast wind today kicked up some nasty waves out beyond the limits of Biscayne Bay, and indications tonight were for a continuation of the blow tomorrow. A shift in the direction of the wind was hoped for, however, as this would permit fishing.

The president and the members of the fishing party, which includes Chairman Lasker, of the shipping board; Secretary Christian, Charles G. Dawes, Carl G. Fisher, John Oliver Layor, of the National Geographic society; E. C. Romfy, Miami banker; Brigadier-General Sawyer and James A. Allison, his host on the trip, left the Flamingo hotel dock at 3 o'clock aboard the express cruiser Seashore. The run to Cocolobo Cay was made in two hours and the party, disembarking, went to the Cocolobo Cay club, owned by an exclusive fishing organization, where the night was spent. Tomorrow if weather conditions are better a run will be made out to sea and three or four hours devoted to fishing.

Harding Free From Care. Mr. Harding tonight is farther from the crowds and the cares of office than at any other time during his vacation trip. Cocolobo Cay is scarcely more than ten acres in area, is separated from the mainland by Biscayne Bay and can be communicated with only by radio.

Prior to the president on the fishing trip, the president with John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross; Senator Hale, of Maine, and former Senator Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey, had sound of golf on the Miami Beach course. He and Mrs. Harding were guests at luncheon of Harvey S. Firestone, the Akron, Ohio, tire manufacturer.

Mrs. Harding after seeing the president off on his fishing trip, went with her host during the Florida trip. Mrs. Edward B. McLean, to a cottage near the Flamingo hotel, where she spent the afternoon and night. It was Mrs. Harding's first night on shore since the house boat cruise began at Ormond a week ago. Tuesday, The Pioneer, on which the cruise from Ormond to Miami was made, was loaded with gasoline and oil today preparatory to leaving tomorrow for Palm Beach. The president and Mrs. Harding, with members of their party, according to present plans, will go to Palm Beach by train and motor Saturday and begin the northward cruise from that place probably Sunday afternoon with stops to be made at Vero, Ormond and other places for golf.

To Visit Augusta. The president, it was learned today, plans to spend about a week at St. Augustine, and then go to Augusta, Ga., for a stay of four or five days. The belief has been expressed that he

LIGHTNING BOLT IMPERILS SHIP; TWO ARE INJURED

New York, March 15.—A lightning bolt which struck the sea 100 feet in the wake of the Alabama during a severe electrical storm Tuesday night, shook the ship as if she were a leaf in a hurricane and knocked her captain and the first officer senseless on the bridge.

Captain Gibbons gave an account of the storm when the vessel arrived today. The lightning shaft, he said, opened a yawning crater in the sea. He declared the shock was so heavy the mechanism of the ship was momentarily paralyzed.

BLECKLEY GIRL IS BEAUTY WINNER

Miss Marie Dykes, of Cochran, Crowned Queen of Dublin Industrial Exposition.

Dublin, Ga., March 15.—(Special.) Miss Marie Dykes, of Cochran, representing Bleckley county, was crowned beauty queen of the twelfth district at the Dublin Industrial exposition tonight. She was selected from eleven young women representing as many counties in the district by judges selected from each county in this district late this afternoon.

The voting on the young women was close, and the judges took a number of ballots before they made a selection. Wrightsville, Alamo, Vidalia and Dublin all had entries that came very near to getting first place.

Miss Dykes is a beautiful young woman and was selected as the most beautiful to represent Bleckley county. She has made a great many friends by her charming personality here this week and by her charming beauty.

Coming at the end of the big Kiwanis convention the selection of the queen of the district aroused a great deal of interest. The big exposition hall was crowded to capacity when the queen was announced and crowned with a pretty ceremony.

Friday night the queen is to be presented with a beautiful gold medal in token of appreciation of her royal beauty and charming personality.

Howell Mullis, of Cochran, was chosen king of the carnival by the queen. He was presented the coronation.

Install Your Furnace When Your Home Is Built

By installing your furnace when your home is built, a great saving is made. Materials, carpenters to cut holes for radiators, and men putting in the foundation to dig your basement are all on the ground and can do it at a great saving in cost to the builder.

Installing your furnace when your home is built, not only saves you money but gives you a much better heating plant that will give more satisfactory service.

If you are building this spring you should by all means install your furnace at the same time.

When you run out of Gasoline!

there is a most effective danger signal to warn you—your car comes to a stop without any particular amount of damage being done. It is different when you run out of lubricating oil in your motor: there are no warning signals, nothing to flag your attention until great damage has been done.

The greatest single factor in the economical and efficient operation of a motor car is the proper lubrication of its engine. Sufficient quantity, the right quality, the proper weight or grade, and the frequent replacement of oil are the things you want to watch.

You can solve all these problems by putting nothing in your crank case but Polarine, consulting the chart of recommendations to determine just what grade your car requires, and renewing your oil completely after it has been used for six or seven hundred miles.

There is no variation in the quality of Polarine. Wherever you see a dealer who displays a Polarine sign, you may feel assured that you can get there the finest motor oil on the market to-day.

OUTLINES TAX PLAN OF NORTH CAROLINA

A. J. Maxwell Makes Address at Luncheon of City Club.

Expressing his opinion that the tax system of North Carolina had been largely responsible for the rapid development of that state, A. J. Maxwell, chairman of the North Carolina corporation commission, explained the workings of this system to members of the City club at luncheon at the club hall Thursday.

Mr. Maxwell declared that North Carolina had found herself with a large deficit at the time the movement for a change in the old tax system was started, and that the need for more revenue in order to provide the public services demanded had been the father of the system which he aided in working out.

Describing the system, Mr. Maxwell declared that it was a departure from the general tax on property idea, and that it drew revenue for support of the government from sources which proved fairer to taxpayers.

Shows Disadvantage. He stated that a tax on property might work an injustice in that one man's property might be made to yield a return while the owner of another piece of property of equal value might actually lose money, but at the end of the year the tax on the two properties would remain the same.

At the time when North Carolina was forced to make arrangements for more revenue, he declared, the point had been reached where a tax on property could not well have been raised, due to public opinion.

Through an amendment to the state constitution, he stated, the income of property was made taxable, and this helped to provide revenue. Other sources of revenue include a special tax on gasoline and special licenses.

In explaining the system had been put into effect in his state, Mr. Maxwell declared that the movement had been supported generally by the larger taxpayers. He declared that the policy of making the tax fair and reasonable had largely been responsible for the success of the movement.

Only through having the increased revenue available, Mr. Maxwell declared, could the state have met the demands for expansion, road building, and other public improvements as it has, and therefore he attributes its development largely to the system of taxation which provides the revenue without making the people feel that they are being unjustly taxed.

Following his address, a number of questions were asked as to details of the North Carolina taxing plan. Edgar Watkins, president of the club, presided and introduced Mr. Maxwell.

ELKS OF ATLANTA BREAKING RECORDS FOR MEMBERSHIP

Reveries to be smashed in the election of new members to the Atlanta lodge of Elks. At the regular meeting held on Thursday evening, 170 new members were added to the lodge. Among them are Lee Ascraft, H. M. Adams, Charles H. Black, Dameron Black, W. H. Brittain, Walter T. Colquhoun, H. L. Davis, Jackson P. Dray, Jesse Draper, Clint W. Hager, J. J. Landers, Louis Maackel, Norman Miller, Jack Pappenheimer, R. E. Sims, S. L. Sloan and Melvin R. Voss.

Another feature of the meeting was the voting of life membership in the lodge to Exalted Ruler Judge L. F. McCallan, J. Turner Fitten, Louis T. Millard and Barney Bernard. These were awarded on account of distinguished service to the order.

Judge McCallan is just finishing his first year as exalted ruler and has been re-elected for a second. During his administration, the most important movement in the history of the Atlanta lodge has been put under way.

The convention of the grand lodge, at the present membership campaign, Messrs. Fitten, Miller and Bernard have been unusually active in the support of all lodge activities.

FLOAT WILL SHOW ATLANTA SKY LINE AT BIG FESTIVAL

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce will be represented at Fort Valley on March 22, at "Peach Blossom festival," by an ingenious float showing the sky line of Atlanta in colors, it was stated Thursday.

Assistant Secretary J. E. Addicks is arranging for the float, and declares the passengers of the float will be beautiful Atlanta girls.

Another Atlanta firm announced Thursday that it would be represented by a float at the festival. Several corporations had already signified their intention of being represented, and the International Harvester company entered its float Thursday.

The Peach Blossom festival has become an annual event in Fort Valley, and this year they plan to entertain even more than were present last year when several thousands enjoyed the barbecue and other hospitalities showered on visitors at this season.

Edgar T. Pickard, chief of the textile division of the department of commerce arrived in Atlanta Thursday and spent several hours in conference with local textile manufacturers. Mr. Pickard is making a trip through the south with the view of furnishing information to textile men relative to conditions abroad which will enable them to market their goods to better advantage in the foreign field, he stated.

Mr. Pickard declared that he was impressed with the broadness of views held by southern textile men. He stated that all cotton manufacturers were beginning to realize possibilities of foreign trade, and were also beginning to realize the importance of keeping up with conditions in other industries at home and abroad which affect the cotton mill business.

He will leave for Columbus Friday, continuing his trip through the south stopping in textile centers.

Ask Committee To Probe Forest Conditions Here

Senators Are Invited to Hold Hearing in Atlanta Next Week.

Blairsville, Ga., March 15.—An invitation to the special senatorial committee on reforestation to include Georgia in its itinerary of South Atlantic states and to visit Atlanta on its trip next week has been sent by Bonnell H. Stone, president of the Georgia Forestry association, to Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon, chairman of the committee. Conditions existing in the timber lands in the south and steps which must be taken for the perpetuation of forest resources will be investigated by the committee which includes Senators Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, and Duncan U. Fletcher, of Florida. In his letter to Senator McNary, Mr. Stone pointed out that Georgia has more than 5,000,000 acres of devastated forest lands and that the soil and climate of the state render it especially suitable to reforestation. Quoting from a statement by Austin Cary, of the government forest service, Mr. Stone said in his letter, "There is no region in the world that probably has greater natural facilities for producing timber values than the district centering on the Okefenokee swamp, stretching west from near Savannah, some miles north of Waycross to Valdosta, the border passing then south to Liveoak and taking in a large area in the state of Florida." Mr. Stone offered the services of the Georgia Forestry association to the committee in making its investigation and urged that one of the committee hearings be held in Atlanta.

This Buick, valued at $1,020 delivered in Atlanta, will be awarded the club member turning in the greatest sum of money on subscriptions to "The Standard Southern Newspaper" between March 12 and March 24. Cash alone counts in this campaign; votes have nothing to do with deciding the winner.

At the same time that the special Buick offer expires, the last bonus vote offer of the campaign also officially dies. No bonus vote or special prize offers of any kind will be made after that time. The last week of the campaign will see club members securing only the regular scale of votes.

That's proof convincing that you should work as you have never worked before during the nine days remaining in the special prize and bonus vote offers. Upon their outcome depends your success or failure in the campaign.

Club members are hunched so closely in the club standing that in numerous instances a single annual subscription will make a winner of a loser.

You can't afford to loaf or lag at this crucial moment. Get on the job; stay on the job. Get subscriptions—every one you possibly can—for every one will count heavily in the end.

Another New Idea —the Bordered Linoleum Floor

ONE of the newest ideas for attractive floors to be expressed in linoleum is the bordered linoleum floor. The patterned field is surrounded by a border of plain or gray Jaspé linoleum. Interior decorators developed this idea. They selected linoleum of pleasing design for the field or center area of a room, and laid around it a border of solid color linoleum, black, gray, or other contrasting color. Such bordered floors can be planned to fit any room. This style of floor is especially desirable for large rooms where the border is a cheerful interruption to an otherwise uninteresting expanse of floor space.

Such borders are effective with fields of either Armstrong's Inset or Marble Tile, or Armstrong's Carpet Inlaid patterns.

This choice of a linoleum floor is not limited to specific patterns, but may be extended to cover combinations of designs and borders that allow full range for your taste and needs.

Linoleum floors in these modern designs are not alone pleasing in appearance, but they are very easy to keep good-looking. Linoleum does not require refinishing. Regular waxing and polishing mellows and deepens the color of linoleum, and, as you already know, no surface is simpler to keep clean than the smooth, nonabsorbent, waterproof linoleum surface.

Let us send you a sample of Armstrong's Linoleum, and our 24-page booklet, "New Floors for Old," containing a score of colorplates of distinctive designs that you can see at good stores: Jaspé, carpet inlaid, tile inlaid and printed patterns; also, linoleum rugs, printed and inlaid; information on laying linoleum and how to care for your linoleum floors.

One Killed, Five Hurt When Auto Collides With Railroad Cars

Little Rock, Ark., March 15.—L. S. McDonald, president of the Arkansas Traffic association, was killed and five other men were injured when the automobile in which they were riding early today crashed into a string of freight cars on a railroad siding in North Little Rock. William Powers and Maurice Smith, of Conway, suffered injuries about the head. Their condition was regarded as serious. Jack Wharton of Conway, was taken to a hospital with a fractured arm. The other two injured were not seriously hurt.

Mr. McDonald was driving the automobile in which the men were returning from North Little Rock after attending a celebration incident to the opening of a bridge across the Arkansas river.

against both of the women charging them with perjury and swindling, and violation of the prohibition law. When they made bond in Atlanta on these charges another warrant was procured charging Mrs. McKown with carrying a pistol without a license and later another warrant in Atlanta charging her with perjury.

The verdict of malicious prosecution returned against Fortune by the jury was read by Sheriff Garner to be without precedent in local court history, so far as he knows.

This case has attracted considerable attention here and the court room was packed throughout the trial, which lasted from about noon Wednesday until Thursday afternoon, the crowd overflowing into the corridors and court yard.

Blackmail Charged.

The women were represented at the trial by Attorneys John and Fred Keller, of Lawrenceville, Solicitor General W. O. Dean represented the state. It is understood here that Fortune is charged under two indictments, of two counts each, in Fulton county charging blackmail because of his alleged actions in seeking a fee from the women to prevent a prosecution and later prosecuting the case when they refused to pay him the fee demanded.

The men with whom Mrs. Holmes and Mrs. McKown were en route to Atlanta gave their names as W. J. Blanton and Tom Conley, according to Sheriff Garner. The car was the property of Blanton, who had been arrested several other times on similar charges, the sheriff said. Blanton was released under $500 bond, but has not appeared for trial. The bond probably will be declared forfeited by the judge Friday morning.

Judge Blanton Fortson, of Watkinsville, is presiding.

FORTUNE CHARGED WITH BLACKMAIL

R. B. Fortune, Lawrenceville attorney, against whom a verdict of malicious prosecution was returned by a jury in Gwinnett county superior court yesterday, will be tried in Fulton county superior court next Wednesday under two indictments, of two counts each, charging blackmail, and another indictment charging violation of the state prohibition law.

It is alleged that Attorney Fortune sought to obtain a fee from Mrs. W. I. McKown, and her daughter, Mrs. McKown, to prevent their prosecution in Gwinnett county, and that when they refused to pay him the fee demanded he swore out warrants against them on the charges he claimed to be attempting to protect them against.

Attorney Lea B. Guillebeau, who is representing Mrs. Holmes and Mrs. McKown, stated last night he had been in communication with Sheriff E. S. Garner, and others in Lawrenceville, and that a large party of Lawrenceville citizens were planning to attend the trial here and testify against Fortune.

WILLIAM S. CARTER DIES IN BALTIMORE

Former Rail Chief Succumbs After Long Illness—Served Under McAdoo During War.

Baltimore, March 15.—William S. Carter, 63, former president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, died at a hospital here today.

Mr. Carter had been suffering from arterio-sclerosis. He was removed to the hospital from Washington three weeks ago and his condition became worse Saturday. For the past 48 hours Mr. Carter had been in a state of coma and died without regaining consciousness.

The body of the former brotherhood chief will be removed to Washington where he will be given a Masonic funeral Saturday or Sunday.

Born in Austin, Texas, August 11, 1850, Mr. Carter had devoted his whole life to organization of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen. He was president of the union a number of years.

Mr. Carter began as a railroad man when 20 years old and worked as a fireman and engineer for 15 years on several southwestern roads and in Mexico. He later became editor and manager of The Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen's magazine, official organ of the union.

In 1904, Mr. Carter was elected general secretary and treasurer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, serving until 1908, when he became president. He held that office for 14 years.

William G. McAdoo, when secretary of the treasury and director general of the United States railroad administration, appointed Mr. Carter as director of the division of labor in the administration. He served as labor director from 1918 until 1920, in addition to his duties as president of the brotherhood. He later was succeeded as president by D. B. Robertson and became manager of the research department of the union, which office he held at the time of his death.

husband occupies a cell at the city jail, charged with vagrancy.

According to witnesses who appeared against Fernan in police court Thursday afternoon, Mrs. Fernan, who was Mrs. John Ivey, in three months' time had been reduced from comparative comfort and financial independence in a home of her own at 22 Langley avenue, to bleak poverty as a result of Fernan's refusal to work.

Supported Daughters.

Mrs. Ivey, they said, had supported herself and daughters, aged 10 and 12, for two years on insurance and a little property left by her first husband.

Then she met Fernan, an employee of the Southern railroad, who told her, they say, of the large salary he was receiving, a small fortune in a Detroit bank, and a beautiful home in an exclusive residential section of the city. He ardently wooed and won her consent.

On the day of the marriage he quit work. The insurance money dwindled fast, then vanished. A mortgage was placed on the little home the father had left his widow and children, and the most from that was soon gone. Articles of furniture were sold or pawned, and soon there was little left for sale, and the children were sent to the orphanage. Still clinging to the remnant of faith in her husband, Mrs. Fernan sacrificed her most treasured possessions for the sake of her husband, money to go to Detroit. A handsome watch, her first husband's, who was a railroad man, brought a paltry sum. Claiming that he was unable to find work in Detroit, the husband returned and confessed to the wife, it is said, that his story of wealth was untrue.

Appeals to Minister.

In desperation she appealed to the minister who performed the marriage ceremony, to obtain for Fernan his old job on the railroad. This the official gladly consented to do. But Fernan showed no inclination to resume work, and did not go about the employment office, it is said.

Mrs. Fernan's nerves collapsed under the strain. She rented her mortgaged home, and removed her scant belongings to the home of a friend a few doors up the street, with whom she has boarded for the last few days.

Fernan, in his defense, stated that the night following the marriage his wife asked him to give up work on the railroad. He admitted, however, that he had won the confidence of Mrs. Ivey under false pretenses. Judge Johnson then placed him under $500 bond for vagrancy.

Burglars looted the Lancaster Drug store, at 253 Whitehall street, Wednesday night, taking a quantity of cigarettes, cigars, chewing gum, tobacco and candies.

kept busy all day answering calls. Chief John Jentzen, of the sanitary department, had five trucks at the call of citizens and workers of the committee and assigned thirty men to the downtown district to remove the dirt and rubbish.

Following the luncheon of the Junior chamber of commerce, the members of the club proceeded in a body to Five Points, where they endorsed the clean up and paint up campaign by sweeping clean the pavements in that vicinity.

Brand new brooms for the occasion were furnished by the Piggly Wiggly company.

Exhibitions in local theaters for encouraging the campaign were arranged by Montgomery Hill, of Southern Enterprises, incorporated, and the National Window Cleaning company agreed to donate the services of thirty-five workers to clean windows of unoccupied buildings in the downtown section—and buildings whose owners will not have the work done.

All civic organizations are backing the movement. Benjamin D. Watkins is chairman of the general committee, and headquarters are being maintained at city hall.

Reports of places needing attention should be telephoned to Hubert Lee at the city hall, and calls for trucks to remove trash may be turned in there.

NO INDICTMENTS IN MER ROUGE CASE

C. Andrews and "Tot" Davenport were abducted on the Bastrop-Mer Rouge road while returning by automobile from a picnic celebration at Bastrop. The abductors, estimated at from 15 to 20 men, one in a white robe and the remainder wearing black hoods, placed the five in a truck and drove away. Late that night J. L. Daniel and Andrews were released after being flogged, while Davenport was released without punishment. Richard and Watt Daniel disappeared.

Relatives of the missing men insisted the kidnappers be punished and enlisted the aid of Governor Parker in the search for them. In September department of justice to investigate the case. Their deductions were that Richard and Daniel had been murdered and their bodies cast from the Eastland ferry landing into Lake La Fourche, 25 miles from here.

In November Governor Parker visited Washington, where he had an interview with President Harding and requested additional federal aid in solving the mystery.

Troops Ordered Out.

On December 21, Governor Parker ordered a company of infantry of the state national guard into Morehouse to drag the lakes in search of the bodies.

In the early morning hours two days later the troops engaged in a skirmish with a boatload of men on Lake Cooper which was at the time closed to traffic. While this was in progress dynamiting occurred on Lake LaFourche, 20 miles away, where the next morning the bodies of two men bound with telephone wires and badly mutilated were found floating on the surface of the lake surrounded by thousands of dead fish. The bodies were identified as those of Richard and Daniel.

More Soldiers Called.

Governor Parker immediately ordered an additional company of infantry and a machine gun company into Morehouse and set January 5 as the date for an open hearing at the courthouse at Bastrop to investigate the slaying of the two men and the activities of masked bands in the parish which the governor attributed to the Ku Klux Klan.

The open hearing revealed stories of abductions, deportations, floggings, sending of threatening notes and details of the circumstances leading to the disappearance of the men who were murdered. These crimes were charged to bands of black-headed men accused of being members of the Morehouse Ku Klux Klan. Names of many klansmen were associated with the crimes. The black head was identified as part of the "raiding" regalia of the parish Klan.

Unidentified Woman Leaps to Her Death Over Brink of Falls

Niagara Falls, N. Y., March 15.—A woman leaped into the river about 50 feet above the brink of the American falls today and was swept to death over the cataract. She was apparently 25 years old and well dressed, wearing a brown tailored suit, gray stockings and chinchilla dolman. She engaged an automobile at the Imperial hotel earlier in the day to make a tour of the points of interest. In the car she left a small handbag containing $18 in money, a railroad check issued at Albany and a string of pearls. She did not register at the hotel as she only ate breakfast there.

ALABAMA COAL MINERS GET WAGE INCREASES

Birmingham, Ala., March 15.—Approximately 30,000 coal and ore miners and day laborers in the Birmingham industrial district and Alabama coal fields today started on a new schedule of pay that will bring an average weekly increase to them of more than $100,000.

The new wage scale will amount to more than $3 a week increase to each man, the schedule averaging about 121-2 per cent.

The boost in wages was voluntary on the part of nearly all the larger corporations and individual employers.

It was announced at a time when coal production was limited only by car supply and when furnaces and steel mills were operating at peak of production.

The labor situation is said by industrialists to be steadier than it was weeks ago, although there is some movement of negro labor to northern and middle western sections of the country. The demand for labor on farms and the high price of labor, it was stated, has tended to weaken the drift to the industrial centers.

Reports from industries throughout the Birmingham district which include Bessemer plants and from Gadsden indicate that books are piled with orders with prices stiff.

It is well known that many jewels are susceptible to the changes in health of their wearer. Amethysts change from rich purple to violet with falling health, opals shrink and pearls lose their luster.

New Millions Are Coming to Georgia To Expand Your Telephone System

In a previous advertisement we reviewed the records and plans of the Southern Bell Company as a whole, showing that the development during 1922 in this section was tremendous and set new high records; that the total investment at the beginning of 1923 was forty-eight million dollars, and that thousands of new telephones were added.

Georgia's telephone growth last year also established new records and required the best efforts of a splendid organization.

The gross additions to the telephone plant in Georgia during 1922 amounted to $2,462,903.38 and 20,654 new telephones were installed. There were 16,473 discontinuances, leaving a net gain of 4,181 telephones.

There are 108 Southern Bell exchanges in Georgia with 97,131 telephones and connecting with 35,341 telephones of other companies in the state.

Approximately 800,000 local calls were handled daily in Georgia and there were approximately 3,000,000 originating long distance calls during the year.

Georgia's telephone system contains about 300,000 miles of wire of which 42,242 miles are used for long distance purposes, and there are 18,924 poles.

The telephone plant in Georgia represents an investment of $19,709,136 and is built, maintained and operated by 3,389 employees whose annual payroll is $4,417,166.

These workers all live in Georgia and most of them are native born. They spend their wages here at home for food, clothing, rent, light, heat and taxes just as you spend your salary.

The plans for the growth and development of the telephone system in Georgia for the next five years are such that the skill and energy of the telephone organization will be taxed to the utmost.

STATE BANKS' REPORT.

That economic conditions in Georgia are rapidly swinging back to normal is shown by the annual report for the calendar year 1922 just issued by the state superintendent of banking, T. R. Bennett.

This report covers only the state banks, and trust companies chartered and operating under the state laws, of which there are 599 all told. The same relative ratios, however, are shown by the national banks, hence the conclusions reached from the state banking department's figures may be accepted as unimpeachable.

First, of peculiar significance, is the statement that the total assets of the state banks, as of the date of December 29, 1922, amounted to $280,521,575.71, which total was increased during the readjustment period around January 1 to $300,000,000.

These figures are healthy without comparisons, but when it is known that these assets show an increase of $64,000,000—which is on a pro rata basis more than $100,000 a bank—over the low mark in 1920, when agricultural interests touched bottom following the practical closing of the foreign markets to American production, then the present improved conditions can be more keenly appreciated.

Superintendent Bennett does not hesitate to say, basing his conclusions on the tendency as he has watched and checked it, that these assets will increase another $50,000,000 during the present year, and will reach up toward the half billion mark by the end of 1924.

Perhaps the most significant part of this bank report is that dealing with the totals and comparisons in loans and discounts.

The year 1922, in these 599 state institutions, showed a decrease of $5,934,283.70 in loans and discounts—that is to say in customers' paper. That means that the borrowers in state banks alone were enabled by improved conditions to liquidate nearly six millions of dollars, which is a most remarkable showing under existing reconstruction conditions, plus the ravages of the boll weevil in cotton production. It means that thousands of farmers, which is a literal truth, have learned the lessons of weevil solution, by decreasing cotton acreage, intense cultivation, and by applying the surplus acreage to the growing not only the food and feed, both of which they have heretofore largely bought, but by finding other than cotton cash crops, such as live stock products, etc.

While the customers of state banks decreased their notes nearly six million during the year, the banks themselves decreased their bills payable and rediscounts $18,483,344.41, which is one of the healthiest items in the report, showing the growing strength of the banks to operate on their own resources.

Another item of keen interest is that total deposits during the year increased $20,609,519.27.

On the whole the statement is most encouraging. It should, of itself, counsel caution. The psychology of prosperous times unfortunately promotes recklessness, extravagance, and a lack of sound and systematic planning so essential in success.

The farmers, for instance, must not flock back indiscriminately to cotton, but strengthen the program of prosperity which means cotton as a surplus and not as a primary crop.

Forces are working all over this country—and Europe—today to free quantity production in 1923 the southern cotton belt. This should be considered.

There should be a general tendency toward sane economy. That does not mean penury; but it does mean investments instead of speculations.

There is no reason why Georgia should not take her place as one of the wealthiest states in the Union on a per capita basis; but her people can only progress to that degree that the commonwealth progresses, and the revenue system of the state becomes stabilized.

THE VETERANS' BUREAU.

The suicide in Washington of Charles F. Cramer, until recently chief counsel for the Veterans' bureau, accentuates interest in the many charges against the administration of the bureau during the past two years, and in the senate investigation which is now just beginning.

Mr. Cramer had charge of all legal matters pertaining to hospital contracts, which form one of the principal allegations of irregularity in bureau affairs.

Whatever may have been the motive for taking his own life it is only charitable to assume that the nervous strain incident to recent criticisms was primarily responsible.

This department of the government has been under fire almost continuously since it began to get in full swing shortly after the demobilization of troops, but the criticisms have not been so severe as within the past few months.

One of the great troubles has been the influence of politics in the internal workings of the department.

With a completely new and untried organization involving the assembling of a personnel of many thousands of people, politicians used it as a dumping ground not only for the payment of major and petty political debts, but unfortunately in the pressing of priorities, claims, hospital locations, supply contracts, and so on.

The yielding to insidious political influences and intimidations was perhaps more general and indiscriminate than would have been the case with an older and more experienced arm of the government.

Commander Owsley, of the American legion, in Atlanta Wednesday, very correctly declared that this arm of service should be made independent, under the president's personal supervision, and divorced entirely from politics.

Following the recent resignation of Director Forbes President Harding appointed Brigadier-General Frank T. Hines as director. While he was not the choice of the legion the latter, as declared by the national commander, is "waiting and watching," ready to offer him co-operation in every efficient move. This ought to be a good appointment.

General Hines distinguished himself in the world war, first as chief of staff of the embarkation service, and then as chief of that service, which accomplished the feat of sending 2,100,000 soldiers overseas in eighteen months and bringing that army back within eight months.

The new head of the bureau has the reputation of being an indefatigable worker.

He will not be hampered by lack of funds, for congress has appropriated for the Veterans' bureau for the next fiscal year, beginning July 1, the sum of $426,660,773 or $10,606,870 more than the appropriation for the present fiscal year.

Prior to the current fiscal year the total federal expenditures for ex-service men were $1,435,854,385. Altogether there has been appropriated and expended or appropriated for expenditures upon work and relief for ex-service men a total of $2,282,579,011.

It is hoped, in the interest of the good name of America, and the usefulness of her millions of former service men, that the Veterans' bureau probe may be so thorough that any and all defects, if any, shall be discovered, and quickly removed.

The integrity of every department of federal service should be so outstanding as to admit of no question; and most assuredly this applies first of all to that branch in which the government is clearing its obligations to those who fought her battles.

ROUNDING THEM UP.

An ex-member of the bootleg "fraternity" issues a public warning to his former partners in the business, to "get out and stay out, before the law comes down on you!"

This warning appeared recently in the Dublin (Ga.) Courier-Herald, with editorial comment.

"The best I have to say to you," says this reformed one, "is Stop—before it is too late. They have made an example of me!"

It is evident from this unusual warning word that the federal agents have been making warm weather for the bootlegging trade in Laurens county, and when they round up the booze peddlers changing sentences do the rest.

They won't get them all, of course, but they seem to be burning the woods around them to some purpose, since they are becoming preachers of prohibition!

The testimony of the reformed one at that section is that they have at last arrived at the conclusion that the booze business is "one of the greatest delusions on earth."

"Before we get through," said a federal agent, "we'll make prison examples of a big majority of bootleggers—a round-up, such as Kentucky recently experienced."

Thou Shalt Find Peace.

I.
For all the sorrows
Of the years
Thou shalt find peace;
Though like the base like old folks;
Though like old folks;
Even tears shall cease.
The saddest sighs
For me no more long for Seward the tide goes, swift and strong—
But sings at last a morning song
Where bells ring peace!

II.

Oh, haven of Love's sweetest dreams,
Where Love finds peace!
Oh, rest, beyond the swelling streams—
We have the burden and the bane
In valleys where bitter cups we drain,
But dwell not there—Thank God, again,
But rest in peace!

The Hopkins Journal thinks that "lawyers, who are paid for doing it, are the only ones who should be allowed to give advice."

"Them Good Old Days!"

The Reminiscent One of the Lincoln League, writes of his idea, of "them good old days."
"When you and I were young, Marguerite, men wore boots, let their whiskers grow and swore and chewed tobacco like old folks; women wore long dresses and bustles and underclothes; butter sold for 10 cents and eggs could be had for less than the price of a hen; steak was 8 cents and liver was 5 cents for the asking and most of us asked; a work day was ten hours and the hired girl got $2 without a limousine; if you struck you were out, in in baseball, and your best clothes were riding and often a few dollars' worth of a pain on the right side, south of the meridian, you were told to go seek your head and eventually full of days and appendices and Monkeys roamed the forests unafraid; BETTS WILL SPEAK AT LUNCHEON TODAY

Banker Will Discuss Farm Development Plans of Georgia Association.

George T. Betts, president of the Georgia association, will deliver an address to chamber of commerce members at the assembly hall of the building at 1 o'clock today. Secretary Baker announced Thursday.

Mr. Betts will outline to Atlanta business men and bankers his program for agricultural and business development of the state, popularly referred to as the "hen, hog and cow" campaign.

Co-operation on the part of bankers and business men with farmers to enable them to diversify crops, it was stated, is what is sought by Mr. Betts. He does not advise abandoning cotton as a money crop, but urges that the acreages be cut and the yield be increased through intensive cultivation, thus releasing other land for planting to other crops.

Mr. Betts' views relative to agricultural development to bring about business and industrial prosperity, Secretary Baker declared, was directly in line with the policy of the chamber of commerce, which is planning a campaign this year in the interest of farmers of the state.

Letters announcing his appearance have been mailed to a large number of the chamber of commerce members, and arrangements have been made to entertain several hundred at the meeting.

An inspiring story of business optimism and prosperity that is being gradually established in counties which have adopted the Georgia association's cash program of farming in which the dairy cow is the hub of the wheel of farm activity on a rapidly increasing number of farms was told by Mr. Betts upon his arrival in Atlanta.

Plans of Betts.

The banks of every county in Georgia can finance many of their farmers this year in the fencing and seeding of pastures and the purchase of enough dairy cows to operate their farms on a self-supporting cash basis with an investment no larger than will be required of them to furnish, either directly or indirectly, the credit for supplies and equipment necessary to produce the cotton crop under the old system," Mr. Betts said. "And in doing the financing through the dairy cow the banks and the farmers they credit may literally 'eat their pie and have it' for they will produce just as big a cotton crop, the most of which can go to pay old debts and they will have left the cows as a continuing source of cash operating costs, while the cost of supplies paid for from cream checks, will represent practically no gain."

"The banker or agricultural leader who says that financial conditions are at such low ebb in his county or his section that he cannot afford to help his farmers this year to fence and seed pastures and buy a few cows but declares he can only afford under present conditions to help them with supplies while they raise one more money crop of cotton or peanuts or tobacco to enable them to get back on their feet so that they may later go into dairy farming is working along the wrong line. He has not taken the time to investigate and figure it out; he has not studied the report of the federal reserve bank and the reports of large business corporations like the International Harvester company, which show that the only sections of the United States which have stood the acid test of the two years are the dairy farming sections."

How Plan Works Out.

In explanation of how the plan is working out in Georgia, Mr. Betts said: "Take your pencil and figure it out yourself if you have not time to come to Turner county and talk with some of our farmers and bankers. Take a minimum of three cows on a one-horse farm with the hogs and poultry necessary to consume the skim milk; and add a few dollars for grass seed and for fence and buildings for the most simple and economical start. The investment may demand $250, which just about represents the credit somebody has got to extend that farmer for supplies while the cotton is being prepared for market. This is the difference between the two kinds of credit. If the bank loans the money with the cows for security, the farmer will pay for his own supplies from the sale of his own cream from which he will receive about $10 a month per cow or $25 to $30 a month for the three cows. The cow will manufacture enough feed for the hogs and poultry in the form of the skim milk just about to balance the value of the cream, enough when fed in right proportion with corn and other grains to almost double the feeding value of the grain. Besides, the fertilizer is saved to increase the fertility of the land and increase production the following year. On the other hand, if the banker or supply merchant follows the old method of basing their credit simply upon the prospect of a good crop and a fair price, even though the crop and price may chance to be satisfactory, the cost of supplies must be deducted from the gross returns from the cotton. The one is a safe system of banking and a system of insured farming; the other, gambling pure and simple, as proved by the rural conditions existing throughout the south after 40 years of cotton farming without live stock before the boll weevil came.

"The county whose financial condition is at such low ebb that the bankers and business men cannot afford to carry dairy cow insurance, which we have proved in Turner county, pays its own premiums plus certain liberal dividends and which is the only sure way of making cotton a real money crop, is, in my judgment, at too low ebb to be helped at all. Indeed, this type of county is the only type of county that cannot afford at all to be without dairy cow insurance."

PROBLEM OF TAXES WORRIES LEADERS

There will go no farther in the end. That is the hard fact that this administration, and anyone that succeeds it in the next few years, must face.

Compare Expenses.

Meanwhile, both democrats and republicans are coming over appropriations figures of the recent congress to see where the government's annual expense total stands in relation to previous years. And there is so little difference that the opposing parties take the same figures and republicans are able to show a reduction of $200,000,000 while the democrats show that the

GOVERNOR-ELECT FLAYS TAX LAWS

Walker Is Principal
Speaker at Kiwanis Exercises at Dublin Industrial Exposition.

Dublin, Ga., March 15.—Touching briefly on state policies Governor-elect Cliff Walker, in an address before Kiwanis club members from all over the state gathered at the court house here today, declared that the Georgia tax laws were antiquated, and that his administration would foster a change in the entire system.

Mr. Walker declared that the burden of taxation now falls upon real estate owners in the state, and that many wealthy men escape taxation because they own no visible property. The occasion upon which the governor-elect spoke was "Kiwanis day" of the industrial exposition and style show now taking place here. He was introduced by P. S. Twitty, lieutenant-governor of the Kiwanis club, who presided at the meeting. Mayor J. B. Jones made the address of welcome.

MEMORIAL WINDOWS WILL BE UNVEILED

The other two will be unveiled Sunday, March 25. One of them, in memory of Frank Dancy, given by his widow and children, shows the "Triumphal Entry into Jerusalem," while the other portrays the "Calling of Peter and Andrew." and was given in memory of David Brown Harris, by his widow.

PREPS LOSE TO PETRELS

BY ROY E. WHITE.

Oglethorpe and Tech High ushered in the baseball practice season with a game on Hernando field Thursday afternoon. It is needless to say that Oglethorpe beat, the score being 8 to 1. The Petrel nine used a varsity team throughout the nine innings and made only four substitutions, three pitchers and two catchers being used. Jake Morris, the star slab artist of the Oglethorpe nine last season, pitched the first four innings and had the Smithies eating out of his hand all the way. Humphries relieved him in the fifth and worked to success until the ninth, when he was relieved with a man on first base due to his error. Pearce, former pitcher of Riverside, finished the game and allowed the Smithies a run in the last frame.

Speedy Spear, a pitcher formerly with the World's Fair nine, pitched for five innings and allowed the Petrel nine only three hits, one a three-base clout, which scored two runs ahead of it, one double which drove in a tally, and one for a single that proved costly. Florida, a recruit, pitched four innings for the Smithies and did well on the mound.

Many Errors Costly.

Errors were largely responsible for the Oglethorpe losses as they put the runners on the paths that later scored on well-earned singles.

Oglethorpe played a good game and only one error was chalked up against Pearce, road nine and that proved to be a helper to the loss. Smithy gaily in the final frame. Ed Daulty played a good game at first base and clouted a pinch double in the first inning that scored a run. Parrish was the hitting star of the game with a triple and a single in four trips to the plate. Parrish covered much ground in left field as his part of the defensive play.

"REALITIES" PRESENTED BY THEATER GUILD

"Realities," a one act play, was presented at a meeting at the Little Theater Guild, at Cable hall Thursday night. Miss Gladys Criffler, and Roffler Chance, the authors of the play, and Miss Gladys Mason, Mr. Ivey, and Robert Kilore, composed the cast. Dr. James Routh, of Oglethorpe university, gave an address on play-writing.

FINE HITTING FOR JACKETS

BY JOHN STATON.

The Georgia Tech baseball team played its first game yesterday, even if it was only in the nature of a trial affair. Opponents were the Commercial High school. The game lasted five innings, being interrupted at that stage by rain drops, but it gave Coach Clay ample opportunity of seeing what could be expected of his men under fire.

They showed up admirably, considering everything. The score at the end of the fifth inning was 7 to 0, with Tech holding the big end. Joe Patisino started the ball rolling when he knocked a home run in the second inning. The ball traveled just about as far as any home run that has ever been hit on the Tech diamond.

After that, hits became numerous and thick, Tech men procuring the old safe swats at will. It is admitted that the Commercial High pitcher did not have the stuff that Tech batsmen will be called upon to face later on in the season, but, that despite of hits proved the men still have their eye on the ball, and can still wield a wicked club.

Hines and Tanner comprised the Tech pitchers for the afternoon. Hines pitched the first three innings, and Tanner carried the game from there until the rain intervened. That game broke the ice. Many more are to come before the regular opening of the season on March 28. The games will all be trial affairs, but will give the team some mighty good practice. Right now, Coach Clay and Manager Armentrout are dickering with some of the big league clubs which will train near Atlanta. Coach hopes to play a couple of games with the big tenters before his team backs up against Penn State.

MRS. MALLORY VS. LENGLEN

Nice, France, March 15.—The spectacular rivalry between Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen and Mrs. Mollie Mallory, only faintly tinged, if at all, with friendship, will be carried to the tennis court in another combat Friday. This rare spectacle was assured when Mrs. Mallory on Thursday defeated two opponents and advanced to the final round of the south of France tournament in which Suzy is defending her title.

Mrs. Mallory, holder of the American championship, was defeated four times in singles and doubles matches in the Monte Carlo and Menton tournaments. But she has returned to form in the present tournament. She defeated Miss Tobin in the morning match, Thursday, 6-3, 6-4. Mrs. O'Neill, her opponent in the fourth round match in the afternoon, is a more dangerous player than Miss Tobin and she carried Mrs. Mallory to 14 games in the first set before the Norwegian woman won 8-6. Mrs. Mallory won the second set from Mrs. O'Neill 6-3.

Mrs. Mallory had a share in a third victory Thursday when she and Wally Myers won from Mademoiselle Franke and M. Reynaud in a mixed doubles match. This also was a stubborn fight. The score was 11-9, 4-6, 6-3 and the last few games were played in semi-darkness.

A great crowd of fashionables, gathered here from all the capitals of Europe.

JOE ECKFORD IN HIGH JUMP

George Griffin, Tech track coach, says that he is going to make a high jumper out of Joe Eckford, the alternate captain of the basketball team for next year. Joe has lots of natural form and plenty of spring. Coupled with that is the fact that he doesn't have much avoirdupois to carry over the bar with him.

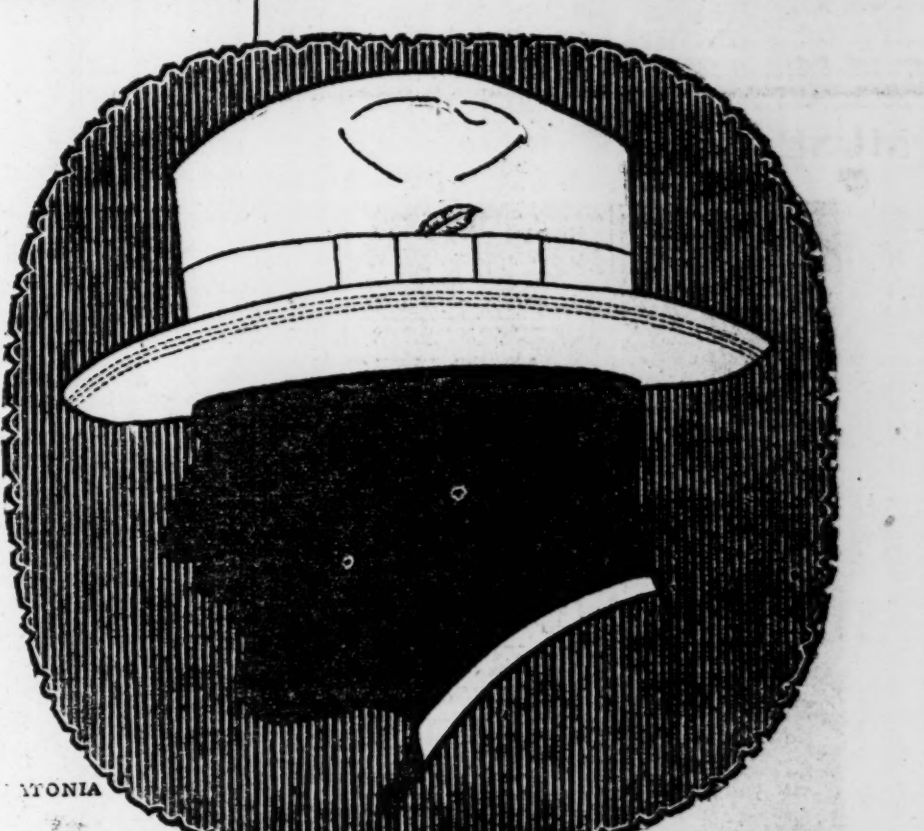

Joe developed as much form in one afternoon as other men have acquired in years of practice. Right now, he is just learning the fundamentals and is not trying for height, but if rapid improvement signifies anything, then Joe will be one of Tech's regular high jumpers when the season starts.

Jimmy Brewster is good for five feet ten most any meet, so Tech will be well for field in that event. It is most likely that Jimmy will come over to the track team before long and lead the high jumpers.

Field day is not long off and then will come the real test. Many men look good in practice but cannot deliver the goods in the actual contest. Coach Griffin announced that he would not cut the squad until after field day, and that he would judge largely the ability of the men by their performance on that day.

Miller Plans to Cut Battery Squad Immediately

Cracker Club Will Carry 6 Hurlers Through Race; One Southpaw to Be Used

Arrangements Being Made for Game at Palatka Between Atlanta Team and Mack's Philadelphia Americans.

PLAYER FARMED OUT.—Palatka, Fla., March 15.—(Special.)—It was announced tonight that Vincent Dooly, a young left-hand pitcher signed by Manager Miller had been farmed out to the Spartanburg, S. C., team in the South Atlantic league. Dooly was discovered by Manager Miller last year when he pitched a 1 to 0 game at the Polo grounds in New York city in a game between the firemen and policemen. Miller had planned to bring Dooly to the training camp, but finding that President Corbett had already lined up a bunch of pitchers, he was forced to leave the youngster behind. Miller received word of the trade from President Corbett.

BY HENRY ALLEN
(Special Staff Correspondent)
Palatka, Fla., March 15.—(Special.)—The personnel of the Cracker battery squad now in training here is expected to be reduced within the next day or so, declared Manager Miller following the practice this afternoon. Twelve hurlers have been over by the Atlanta manager during the past few days.

There are eight right-handers in the squad, while four southpaws have been running into shape for the season's grind. Six men will compose the twirling staff for the squad after the season gets under way and only one left-hander will be retained. There is a possibility of two porters remaining, but Manager Miller seems inclined to the belief that one is enough.

Pretty Battle On.—But back to the Nothans and Best discussion. Nothans is older and has more experience than Best, who is just starting his third year in professional ball, but a good many have advanced the opinion that the younger will be among those remaining when the cut is made.

Seven right-handers are making a bid for the remaining five berths. Bounie Carr and George Dunant, formerly with Boston; Manly Lewellen, University of North Carolina star, who played with the New York Yankees and Buffalo Internationals.

Last season, "Buddy" Napier and Oscar Turo, veterans of last year's squad, and King Brady, of Milwaukee, seem to be the most likely contenders.

Elmer Hyatt, a youngster who played in the Cotton States league last season and who is having his trial tryout with the Crackers, will probably be released. "Buddy" Williamson, who tried out with the Crackers last year and remained for a few weeks, will have a hard time to gain a place on the twirling staff. The crowd is not strong enough to string on him if he fails to make the grade.

In Dumont Carr, Lewellyn, Brady and Best as the new additions to the twirling staff, the Crackers will have a strong array of hurlers to bear the brunt of the coming campaign. The ability of Turo and "Buddy" Napier is already known to the Atlanta fans. If this crew is not strong enough to do the work, President Corbett has already promised another major league twirler. Although no definite time has been set for the date of the cut, it is believed that Hyatt and Ware will be the first to go, while the others will be kept until later in the season.

Two practices each day will be in order at that time. The morning session will be devoted to batting work, and the pitchers will be given an opportunity to throw a few to the hitters. During the afternoon the practice games between the yanigans and regulars will be started, while the Palatka club will organize this week and several games will be played. It was learned today that the Crackers might also play the Philadelphia Athletics one game while in Palatka. Nothing definite has been decided about the game with the Cincinnati Reds.

Manager Miller seems well pleased with the progress being made by the batters. Following the practice today he remarked that never before in the history of his baseball career had he ever seen the pitchers in such good condition for so early in the season.

The program for the practice today was the same as has been followed out since Monday, when the coaches called out under way. Manager Miller continued to give the batters personal instructions, while the usual "pepper" games were continued.

J. P. C. QUINTET WINS BATTLE

GIRLS PLAY TONIGHT.
Tonight at 6:15 o'clock the championship of the Girls' Commercial Basketball league will be settled on the Wesley court between the Central Presbyterian and Draughton teams. The season ended a week ago with the two teams in a tie for first place and the tie will be broken tonight. Both teams have been working hard for the past week in final preparations for the game. The Central Presbyterian team is expected to win. A small admission price will be charged to witness the championship battle.

The Jewish Progressive club closed its basketball season with a victory over the Trinity Tramps Thursday night in the Capitol avenue court before a crowded house. The score was 41 to 19. The victory closes a successful season for the club. The team played only two games last season and only two games were lost during the entire season, one to Tech early in the year and one to the Trinity Tramps. The team has a lot more speed than last season and is expected to win with it. The team is now in the lead.

Joe Finklestein, Spillberger, Doran and Rosenberg played the best ball for the winners. Spillberger kept the Trinity five from scoring but two field goals in the first half and had the losers shooting from long range in the second half. Joe was responsible for 19 points for the winners while Spillberger scored 12. Doran was third with 8, all four field goals being registered from the center of the court.

Second Half.
In the second half the Trinity five cut loose with some long shots and seven took effect. Only one Trinity field goal was made at range closer than the foul line in the second half, so good was the J. P. C. guarding. Smith and Christolm played good ball for the losers. Christolm scored three field goals from the center of the court and Smith scored two. The Trinity passing system, Smith also scored 6 points and covered the floor well at all times. His guarding was a feature.

The Lineup:
J. P. C. (41) Pos. T. T. (19)
Finklestein (19) r.f. (2) Denny Spillberger (12) l.f. (2) Doran (8) c. (2) Christolm (8) c. (2) Smith (8) c. (2) Rosenberg (2) l.g. (1) Wimberly (2) c. (1) Granger (1) c. (1) Substitutions: J. P. C. BRUINS RULE AS FAVORITES

Southern league baseball teams will cast their eyes toward the 1923 Dixie gamelan when official activities open on April 17 with the warmest fight in many seasons expected by sport fans.

All of the clubs are claiming the strongest teams in years for the present season and a fight to the finish is to be looked for. Birmingham, New Orleans, Atlanta, Mobile, Chattanooga, Memphis, Nashville and Little Rock are fast becoming set for the race.

Mobile, champions of last year, has practically its same team back with several additional benchmen. The Bears are looked on with fear by every club in the circuit. Bert Niehoff, playing manager of the champions, is making no promises, but he needs make none as the outfit that he has corralled to start the season will take care of that.

Chicks Powerful.
Memphis, runner-up last year and champion of the preceding season, is not to be lightly figured. Although the Chicks did lose their pilot, Spencer Abbott, the Chicks, however, have a new leader whose ability is known throughout Dixie's major league last year when he stepped in and filled Mottsworth's place, and immediately injected pep into what many fans over the south were terming the "peppercorn" Bears.

Chattanooga and Atlanta, the two teams that waged such a battle for the cellar last year, are to be watched more closely this season as both teams have a different brand of ball players to flash on the diamond this season.

Little Rock, led by their fiery pitcher, Kid Eberfeld, has corralled another hard hitting team, while New Orleans and Nashville are both keeping on the "at" previous to the opening of the season.

University of Alabama Team in Good Condition

Freshmen of Last Season Putting Up Great Battle for Places Against Returned Vets.

BY DUKE MERRITT.
University, Ala., March 15.—(Special.)—Through there are the usual sore arm complaints and other things of the sort attendant upon a baseball season, Alabama's basebalers are fast getting into shape for the opening contest with the Philadelphia Athletics, which opens the season here March 21. In fact, development is more rapid and the outlook is more promising than the fondest optimist dreamed of.

In the first place, the pitching staff, which looked like it might be a weak member, is showing surprising strength. The vets are flashing more stuff than they did last year, while all the chaps out to assist them, have shown great ability to do so.

McMillan, the big smoke ball pitcher, has a lot more speed than last season and is expected to win with it. The team is now in the lead.

Herb Steed, the three-year vet, is also vastly improved. He has added both an underhand and side arm ball to his store and has made them quite effective. The most important thing he has accomplished is that he has added some speed, which he lacked. His delivery now has quite a lot of zip.

Scrubs Come Through.

McRae is also looking like a winner, while Tubbs and Art Cunningham will be ready to win games when needed.

Behind the bat, Hubert Cruise and Mayhall, of last year, are going great. Hubert has some soreness in his arm that is retarding him, but the other two are turning in neat performances daily. Pat Cruise has improved 100 per cent over last year's form and is hitting the ball very solidly. He seems determined to overcome the handicap Hubert possesses over him and seems likely to do it. Nothing is settled in the infield but shortstop, due to so many good men, Grant Gillis will play short unless he is shifted to third, but Coach Bernier intends to leave him there for a while at least.

At first Bernier is trying two outfielders, Project and Rosenfeld. Each has some weaknesses that the other has and Bernier, when he decides which of the two is best, will send the one not retained back to the outfield.

At second, Captain Peter Pitts, Tor Davis and Hue Green, all letter men, are having it. Green has been run on third some the past few days, where he may be kept, and Captain Pitts is doing most of the chores there. Captain Peter is too sturdy and dependable with the stick to be kept off, while Davis is also good. Peter, though little, fields surely and well.

Third, where Al Clemens is bidding, may be left to Al or given to Green. Then again Gillis might be sent there and Green to short. Al does not seem to have the quickness in fielding that should characterize a third-sacker. Chick Dominick, a little lad who has scrubbed hard and faithfully for two years, is showing great stuff here and may get the job.

The outfield is showing the same surplus of talent, but any way it is will be strong. Elmore, Oliver and Barnes or Almon will fill the places.

YALE'S DIXIE GAMES GIVEN

Macon, Ga., March 15.—(Special.)—The schedule of the Yale baseball nine for games to be played on its southern trip was announced last night. The schedule calls for seven games, all but one of which will be played in Macon.

Oglethorpe will open the series on March 27, and on the following two days Mercer and Yale will clash. March 30, Yale will find Georgia (turning the opposition for the new Haverens, while Auburn will put the finishing touches to the program, insofar as Macon is concerned, on April 2, when they will journey over to do battle with the Blue and White at Central City park.

The following day Yale will begin its return trip home, stopping over only at Athens for a third game with the Georgia Bulldogs.

No other games will be played, according to the announcement, the team being expected to arrive late in the evening of April 4.

Coaches Pleased.
Coaches Wood and Tommers are exceedingly pleased with the showing made by the Yale team in the first game with the Georgia Bulldogs, and are confident that Yale will have a much better team all-round than the one which last year performed in Macon.

The candidates, coaches, Manager Stone and Director of Athletics Blossom, will leave New Haven on March 24 and probably will arrive in Macon on Saturday afternoon. They will be held the following day, March 26, at Central City park, and the opening game will be played with Oglethorpe Tuesday, March 27. Twenty-two men are expected to make the trip.

The complete schedule follows: March 27—Oglethorpe at Macon. March 28—Mercer at Macon. March 29—Georgia at Macon. March 30—Georgia at Macon. March 31—Georgia at Macon. April 2—Auburn at Macon. April 3—Georgia at Athens.

TOMMY NOBLE & FLORES FIGHT TONIGHT

New York, March 15.—Spring must be advancing.

There will be just one more swatting session at Madison Square Garden before the circus moves in for a visit of six weeks, by the end of which time the weather will be warm enough for the circus to take to the road under canvas.

Tommy Noble, the British featherweight, claiming to be the British champion, is to fight Elmo Flores, a letter-perfect exponent of the English game of scientific boxing.

Pal Moore, of Memphis, who has beaten Carl Tremaine and Joe Lynch, is to fight Danny Lee, a New York bantam, on the same program.

Durant Breaks Record.
Los Angeles, March 15.—R. C. ("Chiff") Durant, automobile race driver in sport tests on the Los Angeles speedway today broke all world records, both competitive and non-competitive, for the five and ten-mile distances, it was announced by speedway officials.

Dodgers Win Game.
Clearwater, Fla., March 15.—The Brooklyn Dodgers defeated the Boston Nationals here this afternoon, 12 to 7, in the first exhibition baseball game of the season here. Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis threw out the first ball. Rain showers interfered with play. Four thousand persons were present here tonight at a banquet in honor of Commissioner Landis.

FIRPO FIGHTS IN N. Y. SOON

BILL IN NO DANGER.
New York, March 15.—Bill Brennan, Chicago heavyweight, who is in a hospital with a slight concussion of the brain, resulting from his knockout at the hands of Luis Firpo Monday night in Madison Square Garden, tonight was declared "out of danger" by a specialist attending him. He will be able to leave the hospital in three or four days, it was said.

Brennan's manager, Leo P. Flynn, tonight made public a letter written to the boxer by William Muldoon, chairman of the New York state athletic commission in which Muldoon praised his showing against Firpo's terrific attack and branded as "unworthy of consideration" newspaper charges that the bout was "fixed" for the South American to win.

New York, March 15.—While boxing circles were regarding with marked skepticism a flurry of reports that Argentine promoters were offering inducements ranging from $500,000 to $1,000,000 for Jack Dempsey to risk his heavyweight title against Luis Angel Firpo, Tex Rickard tonight announced that the South American would make his next ring appearance in a bout on the same card with the Jess Willard-Floyd Johnson match at the Yankee stadium, May 12.

Rickard did not intimate who Firpo's opponent would be, but it was said he might select either Jack Remat, promising Canadian heavy weight, or Tom Gibbons, St. Paul light heavyweight.

Talk of a Firpo-Dempsey match in Buenos Aires was branded, in ring vernacular as "holly hoo," but regardless of the possible outcome of "tentative negotiations" which Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, said were under way with unnamed South American interests, the fact remained that no serious attempt so far has been made to match the champion and the sensational batter from the Argentine.

Star Was Not in College During Spring of 1919 And Has One More Season

Auburn Team Ready for Opening of Season, The Fort Benning Officers Being First to Meet Tiger Squad.

BY EMMETT SIZEMORE.
Auburn, Ala., March 15.—(Special.)—According to an announcement this afternoon by officials of the Alabama Polytechnic institute (Auburn) Ed Shirling, for years one of the mainstays on Tiger football and baseball teams, is eligible to play baseball with his comrades this season.

At one time it was thought by some that Shirling had played his four years, one year of which was the S. A. F. C. year of the spring of 1919, but it later developed that Shirling was not in college after the Christmas season of that year.

This announcement will be received with a great deal of enthusiasm in student circles and among Auburn supporters scattered throughout the nation, as lovers of the pastime are anxious to see this popular grid and diamond star play in the hard schedule that has been outlined for the Plainsmen.

With the initial game but two days off the Tigers braved the chilly northern breeze yesterday afternoon for a five-inning tilt with the freshmen willow men. The varsity line-up scored a couple of times in the earlier stages of the game, but in the last half of the fifth frame the rats circled the bases for five runs. With an extreme cold snap prevailing in Auburn Coach Donahue allowed his pitching crew to ease up on their job, which probably accounts for part of the decision in favor of the new men yesterday afternoon. Joe Harrison slammed out a long one for a round trip in the second inning.

The usual preliminaries were on in the baseball field this afternoon. Batting and fielding practice of considerable length was indulged in by the horseholders at which time mound confining and receiving staff were warming up on the side lines. For pitchers made up the delivery squad. Monahan, Sheridan, Siz and Hines, while Pete Davis headed the receiving line in the absence of Captain Charles Gibson. Monahan and Sheridan are better men of previous seasons in the diamond game, while Siz, the big grid lineman, and Hines are newcomers. Joe Harrison slammed out a long one for a round trip in the second inning.

The Eternal Eve

BY MAY CHRISTIE

A man was a fool who allowed his heart to rule his head. No possible happiness could lie that way.

She was amusing herself, there could be no doubt of it. He was a new type to her.

He rose to his feet with a short, half-amused laugh.

"Guess I'll be getting over to the railway station," he said, then added briefly:

"Please don't worry about the young woman in my story—I've written 'finis' after it—and anyhow 'she' hadn't got a heart that could be broken."

"Eve, are you doing anything particular this afternoon?" Mary Grey addressed her friend, who had just returned from the disturbing lunch and tete-a-tete with Mary's cousin.

"I'm not quite certain—why?" Eve's pretty eyes were turned inquiringly to Mary.

"I think it's possible that Wilfred may get the afternoon off—once he's through with that important old fogey who's come down from town—and I wonder!"

Eve's face changed, and a flush climbed up to her cheeks. She couldn't possibly participate in any party in which Wilfred was to join.

But Mary went on tranquilly:

"I've really seen awfully little of the countryside round about here—I drive Wilfred and me out this afternoon. John and you could sit together in the front of the car—here Mary paused significantly, and it was obvious that her thoughts were directed to the delightful, undisturbed intimacy which this allotment would allow to Wilfred and herself—'you've scarcely given John a chance!' she added reproachfully.

Eve could not restrain a smile. This plan was so very typical of Mary—even to the little altruistic air with which that young woman appeared to sacrifice for others' comfort, while really furthering her own ends.

But aloud she said:

"Captain Roscomon can drive a car as well as I can—ask him to take you himself."

Mary looked off, also reproachful—an amusing combination.

"I'm different from you, Eve—I couldn't thrust myself forward—I've already again. This attitude was merely in keeping with Mary's recent role."

"It was only the other day you told me you were going to cultivate more self-assurance," Eve rejoined, half laughing. "You said the modest, shrinking violet weren't appreciated."

Mary waved the statement aside.

"Do run over to Wilfred's quarters and ask him, dear—I'm sure he'll come." Her tones were very smooth almost pleading.

But Eve's were rather sharp as she made answer:

"Don't be a ridiculous goose, Mary." She turned abruptly from her friend and walked across to the office of her chief to report for further duty.

"There isn't really anything much for you to do," Eve was told. "Go over to Captain Roscomon's quarters and ask him if he needs the car this afternoon."

There was nothing for it but to obey. And a chagrined Eve wended her reluctant way toward the one part of the camp she particularly wanted to avoid.

The door of the hut was open, and as Eve approached it a curious sight met her gaze. For the gallant airman, down on his knees, was tugging vigorously at a loose board in the flooring, which suddenly gave way, revealing an aperture which seemed to contain a mass of documents and papers.

At the sound of Eve's approach he turned, considerably startled.

"I—I didn't know I'd left the confounded door open," he said, rather feebly. Then, seeing who it was:

"Beg your pardon. Please come in and shut the door."

Eve's face hardened a little. She tilted up her head and said in a clear, cool voice:

"No, thanks."

A gentle wind, blowing into the hut, stirred the papers that were crumpled into the crevice in the boarding.

With a quick, annoyed gesture Wilfred strode across the floor, seized the girl by the arm, drew her inside the hut and deliberately slammed the door.

"I don't want half the camp to see my—my safe!" he ejaculated irritably.

A little breathless, Eve drew back.

"You shouldn't have done that—it isn't correct!" an indignant protest shone in her eyes.

"Correct? Who cares?" Wilfred was down on hands and knees again folding his papers together, and carefully replacing the board above them. Then he added, staring up at her in his keen, quick way:

"I'd be obliged if you wouldn't mention what you've seen to any one around this camp—I've no other place to keep those things, and I'd hate to have any one come poking round."

Eve regarded the young man witheringly.

"It's hardly likely that I should boast about having been inside your hut, is it?" She took a step toward the door. "And I didn't come to 'poke about.' I am obeying orders, and came to see if you wanted the car this afternoon."

The young man looked rather ashamed of himself.

"No, I don't want the car, thanks. No, I don't want the car, thanks."

Without a word, Eve swung the door open and stepped out. To her astonishment she collided sharply with a heavily built figure, that appeared to be approaching the hut at a vigorous pace.

"John."

"Why, Eve—I'm—I'm astounded!" the stout sutor was eying her with unmitigated disapproval. "What on earth were you doing in Captain Roscomon's hut? You—you've surely lost all sense of—that is!" He was stammering in amazement.

"Mind your own business, John, and try not to be an idiot!" fell upon his outraged ears.

"But, Eve, it isn't done!" He had swung around and was keeping pace least amuse herself. A little fussy rabbit ran across her path. The air was frosty, and the leaves were crackling under his scampering feet. Behind the woods the sun shone large and rosy, low in the heavens.

Mosses of every color clung around the leafless trees. Quaint little streams flowed sleepily through quiet meadows.

And gradually a kind of peace stole into Eve's troubled consciousness.

She found a little cottage, where she had some tea.

It was a quaint, shabby abode, but the placid contentment of the old woman who lived there shone in her pleasant, wrinkled face as she bustled around, making preparations for the unexpected guest.

"Aren't you lonely, living here?" said Eve.

The old woman seemed surprised.

"I'm that busy I haven't time to think about it," she answered. Then she added quietly:

"I have a great deal to be thankful for."

Eve wondered vaguely what the cause for gratitude could be. Loneliness and poverty and old age—the combination seemed rather dreadful!

She was crippled with rheumatism, too. And yet that placid look remained.

"Why do you live alone?" asked Eve.

"My old man died two years ago," came the simple answer, "and I lost my two sons in the war."

"Oh, I'm sorry," said the girl impulsively, regretting her thoughtless question.

"I get the old-age pension," said the woman, "and I've a daughter married out in Canada, who sometimes sends me a little money. No, I don't complain."

She watched Miss Eve partake of food.

Then, when she had finished—

"I'm rather good at reading fortunes in tea cups," she said, smiling kindly at the young girl. "Will you let me look at yours?"

She drew her low chair near the window, and scrutinized Eve's cup.

"I see a lover," she began, as Eve had expected. Then—

"He has money—but he isn't the one that you're going to marry."

Eve smiled. All this was familiar ground.

The old woman knitted her wrinkled forehead into deeper lines.

"There's a tall, dark man from overseas—he's the one you care for—but I see trouble ahead—for both of you—a jealous girl!"

Eve started. Then she gave a little laugh of amusement. For was not this the orthodox reading, from time immemorial? Every tea cup in the world, as read by fortune tellers, contained a dark lover from overseas and a jealous girl.

"You'll be able to help him in his trouble, if you care for him a great deal," went on the old woman solemnly. It was evident she fully believed in her "occult" powers.

But Eve had heard enough. She paid the woman for her tea—though the latter raised a vigorous protest—then, as it was growing dark, she set off for the camp.

Approaching the precincts of the latter, she declined to take a short cut across the moors.

But distance is deceptive in the half-light; and the way across the moors to the camp was much longer than Eve thought. The paths were not easy to follow; and more than once she had to retrace her steps to circumvent a stream too broad to jump. As time went on she felt a little nervous. The moor seemed so lonely and quiet, and the tall stones looked so weird and ghostly against the sky. Why had she come such a distance? The campfires, twinkling cheerily, seemed far away.

She was passing a clump of undergrowth when suddenly she heard men's voices, talking—and then a sound of footsteps coming near.

Eve's heart beat uncomfortably fast. For something told her these were strangers.

With a quick, impulsive movement she stepped into the undergrowth and remained, almost completely hidden, until the men should pass.

THE VITAL FLAME

BY MAY CHRISTIE

A Stirring Serial of Primitive Passions

CHAPTER XIV.

But Miles' tone was after all frank and platonic and Leonie felt daunted for a moment. The friendlier Miles was, the further off did marriage seem.

"If he would only quarrel with me, I could put in good work in the reconciliation line! Or if I could only make him lose his head and kiss me, then I could do the 'jeune fille' stunt of newly-awakened passion, and swoon into his arms like a Victorian maid! It would be all up with him, then, for he's so quixotic that he'd feel he must propose."

Thus mused the artless girl.

Never had it dawned on her that the field was not entirely hers for the manipulating.

Miles, naturally, had been fated. But—thank heaven! he still remained unspoiled.

"I'll have sole with champagne sauce, please, Capon to follow. And I think—" her eye ran down the wine list. "I think we might celebrate our American successes in a bottle of sparkling muscatel? What do you say?"

Good wine loosened tongues and freed the emotions quite a little. "Number 371" was very potent, that she knew. Miles was rather abstemious, for an artist. His reaction would be all the quicker.

"Anything you choose," he replied nonchalantly. Then, to a waiter: "A bottle of 371! Delicieux! And salted almonds for maitre's."

"You remember all my little weaknesses," cooed Miss Leonie, edging a little nearer to him on the curving sofa, and gazing soulfully at him with her made-up eyes. They were naturally rather small and beady, but art—she fondly thought—had remedied nature's error, addicted to cold baths, fresh air and exercise, and moderate living.

"I was thinking that you remind me so much of a bright, inquisitive little bird that used to twitter on the branch of a tree outside my studio window," said Miles pleasantly.

"But how thrilling! I gazed his pleased companion. "A skylark? Hall to thee, blithe spirit! That's a poem, isn't it?" conscious of the delightful possibilities in this simile.

She was dashed, however, when Miles said frankly:

"It was a robin you reminded me of. Not the song, but something about the turn of the head, and the bright eyes."

"Huh? Perky and beady?" She jerked her head to one side, irritated at the anti-climax. Was this the best that he could do?

"There! Just like that!" he pointed.

He smiled again, his teeth a strong flash of white. (Thank heaven! he was "bien soigné," well-groomed. No flowing ties and baggy velvet jacket! No unkempt locks and grubby hands. No pose! No jargon of the studios! He was simple and direct and unaffected. Just to look at him, one could be sure he was addicted to cold baths, fresh air and exercise, and moderate living.)

ed out triumphantly. "Often, when I saw the little fellow, I'd say to myself: 'There's Leonie Day!'"

"Well, I'm flattered that you thought of me at all. It's a crumb of comfort even to a robin!" she retorted. "That reminds me that I'm not averse to crumbs when they drop from your particular table. And you haven't told me yet how nice I look, or if you like my frock, or anything consoling of that sort! I'll be a docile little robin, and I'll swallow pretty speeches greedily. I promise you."

His denseness needed a crude stimulant, she told herself.

Miles was embarrassed. What was she driving at? Why did she practice coquetry on him?

"You always look all right," was his lame rejoinder. He was relieved when a waiter bustled forward to lay hors-d'oeuvres upon the table, thus creating a diversion.

Leonie could have slapped the obtuse creature. That anyone so good looking as he was could be so ignorant of how another person was feeling, was incredible! Once they were married, she would make him toe the line!

She suppressed her wrath, however, and nibbled daintily at egg mayonnaise and lettuce. She wasn't going to swell the ranks of foolish maids who nipped romances in the bud by yielding to the snubbing impulse. That was the one sure way to lose a man.

But how annoying that he did! He thought she was as pretty as a lover ought to think! My goodness! there would be some reason, had he seen her in the yellow hours of his early morning in her kimono, and without her war-paint on. Leonie had lost two lovers by an unexpected "re-contre" of that sort. But Miles, thank heaven! had only viewed the little lady at her very best.

It was unflattering to see how far away his thoughts were. After the simile of the robin, she wasn't going to offer him another penny story. . . . but she wondered, all the same.

Did she but know it, they had winged across the channel to a very different type of girl. He was cursing the business energy of his manager who had arranged the Paris exhibition to follow on the heels of the New York triumph, and who had wired him to come on at once. Why! he hadn't even had the time to telephone Marcelle, but had had to leave that to a servant, thrusting her address into the man's hands just as the train was leaving.

It was the deuce and all, too, that now, without the memorandum of it, he wasn't positive of her address! Had he long, ardent letter he had penned her on the boat-train and on the channel crossing ever reached her? There was barely time for a reply.

And yet, she might have wired! She had hurt him at the dock, too, by her acquiescence to the arrangements of Tremaine, the dominating, rather insolent fellow who had come to meet her, and had taken complete possession of the girl as though it were his right.

What about the radiogram that had so confused her? Tremaine was the name. There was a big city fellow by the name of Tremaine. . . . Leonie's tones—meted with an edge to them—cut into his worrying thoughts.

"Since you decline to drink to me only with thine eyes," and yet refuse to see the wine that's been standing in the pail of ice at your elbow for

Confessions of a Debutante

BY RUTH AGNES ABELING

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

I ran away from my fiancé, Jonathan Grey, rich and elderly, to the arms of Larry, a man who dances well. His wife.

Mrs. Larry, shows me the folly of my action and becomes my friend. I return home. My engagement is announced, though my affection belongs to Stranger, who staggled to my coming out party, and whose name I refused to listen to because I believed we never could be friends. After quarrelling with Jonathan of my actions and then coming to a better understanding than ever I go shopping. The girl whom Jonathan asked to substitute for me because of the uncertainty of my arrival at my engagement party is arrested for shoplifting. She accuses me of being an aid and it is discovered we have duplicate rings. I am arrested with her. Mrs. Larry, through an old friend on the bench, has me temporarily released. That evening Jonathan takes me to a dance and I bring up the subject of the girl and a bracelet she has which is a duplicate of his gift. He tells me she is threatening breach of promise.

shark had been thoroughly beaten by a chit of a girl, a girl of the streets. Her apparent stupidity had blinded and misled him.

"Can't you pay her off?" I stroked his hand. He seemed so utterly helpless.

"I've paid her and paid her and paid her. I'd be ashamed to say how much money I've given her."

"Has she—has she any other claim?" I asked.

Jonathan only stared at me.

"Breach of promise!" I scarcely breathed the words.

"Breach of promise!" He growled. He had stopped dancing and was piloting me toward the palm screened space.

He pulled a chair out for me and all but pushed me into it.

"I'll tell you about it now," he began matter-of-factly. "You might as well know and have it over with."

"She's been blackmailing me. And my hands are tied. Can't do a thing!" He was talking in short jerky sentences. "She's a girl who was at the party. It started then—with that ring. I thought you might not be there. And I couldn't be a joke for the whole crowd. So I got her. She said she'd play up to the part which ever way it went and with the sum I paid her that night it was finished. But it hasn't finished."

He was silent a moment, a moment during which I found it difficult to face him.

"It's kept on and on and on," he continued finally. "Money—money—money—her demands are never ending."

But the bracelet! I said, not looking at him. The bracelet like mine is still not explained. That couldn't have been necessary.

"When I finished ordering the bracelet for you and started to turn away she stood there beside me," his voice had suddenly taken on a high, cracked, nervous pitch, "and she told me to make a pair! She asked me if she couldn't have a pair—there in front of the clerk! What could I do—I couldn't have a sense!"

"And now," he rushed on, "she's threatening breach of promise!"

Breach of promise! With that phrase my brain started whirling again. Breach of promise—my fiancé! And partially my fault!

"But Jonathan, she couldn't make that stick! I found my voice at length. "Couldn't?" Bitterly. "Couldn't not? There isn't a court in New York that wouldn't award her damages! That ring! That bracelet! What more would she need?"

"I've been a fool! I've been a fool! I've piled up proof for her like some stupid lout! I've been witless!"

As I looked at Jonathan slumped in his chair, nursing his stupidity, I marveled at and pitied his stupidity. This man of power, this financial the last five minutes, I suppose I shall have to open it myself," she said, complainingly.

He started and a streak of red crept into his bronzed cheeks.

"I'm awfully sorry," he apologized. "Here, waiter, unwork this bottle." Then, as he himself poured the golden liquor into her glass: "Forgive me, I was dreaming."

Another fine installment tomorrow. (Copyright, 1923, The Constitution.)

DELICIOUS cake—a friendly discussion of its ingredients over the teacups, has led thousands of women to change to Calumet.

These women who formerly made no distinction between baking powders know now

- that success in baking is a matter of baking powder—not luck.
- that Calumet not only raises dough, but that the scientific composition and the white of egg keep it from falling.
- that it may be depended upon always for light, tender, tasteful baking.

If you have not been uniformly successful in baking, try Calumet in your favorite recipe.

O'Farrell-Kieffer Wedding Is Elaborate Event at Home

An event of interest Thursday evening was the marriage of Miss Mary Isabel O'Farrell and John Frank Kieffer, which was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John N. O'Farrell, in Inman Park, at 8:30 o'clock.

The ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Sam W. Reed, took place in the spacious living room before an improvised altar backed with massive palms as a background for candelabra and pedestals of Easter lilies. Throughout the reception, rooms, palms, foliage plants and vases of spring flowers were effectively arranged and sunlight in graceful ropes adorned the staircase, mantels and chandeliers.

Freeding the ceremony appropriate musical selections were rendered by Miss Ruby McCorkle, at the piano, and Miss Lilian Smith, on the violin.

Bridal Attendants.

Miss Thelma Dargan, as maid of honor, and the bride's only attendant, was beautifully gowned in a French mode of old blue chambray, the skirt fashioned of pastel shaded flowers around the waist. The bodice, which was basque effect, was adorned with a cream lace border and she carried a shower bouquet of snapdragons, pastel shaded sweet peas and roses.

William Haines Mills acted as best man.

The lovely bride entered with her father, John N. O'Farrell, by whom she was given in marriage. She was beautiful in a gown of white champagne.

Mrs. Bagley Wright Honors Miss Rhorer at Bridge-Tea

A very enjoyable party on Thursday's social calendar was the bridge party at which Mrs. Bagley Wright entertained at her home in Marietta complimentary to Miss Ruth Rhorer, a lovely bride-to-be, whose marriage will be among the very interesting events of April.

The house was decorated by a profusion of yellow jonquils artistically arranged. The pretty tea table in the dining room was adorned by a Madeira cloth and had as a beautiful centerpiece a silver basket filled with jonquils and ferns. Surrounding this were silver candlesticks holding unshaded yellow candles.

The guest prize was a piece of lin-erie and the bridge prizes were attractive novelties.

Mrs. Wright was lovely in an afternoon costume of brown canton crepe.

Miss Rhorer wore a becoming spring model of chestnut brown canton crepe. The skirt had an uneven hem line and the waist was fashioned in the basque style. She wore a spring hat of brown satin trimmed with burnt goose feathers.

The guests included Misses Christine Mc-Pachern, Mary Malone, Kate Palmour, Mary Rhorer, Lucile Morris, Virginia Boster, Louise Dean Stevens, Elizabeth McCord, Elizabeth Whitman, Mrs. Jack Simpson, Mrs. Charles Brazleton, of Waco, Texas; Mrs. Charles DeFoor, Mrs. Frank McNeel, Mrs. Carl Hester and Mrs. J. Brenau Follies Will Furnish Evening Of Merriment and Fun on Saturday

Three of the Principals that will make for the success of the Brenau Follies, who will give their annual performance at the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium, Saturday evening, March 17. The tender love scene shows Miss Jo Woolard and Miss Iris Landrum, in a catchy skit from Carmen. Seated is Miss Katherine McQuay, whose solo work should prove an attractive feature. The performance of the Brenau Follies will be given for the benefit of the building fund of the Home for Old Ladies, in West End.

The personnel of the Brenau Glee club which will present the Brenau Follies at the Atlanta theater on the evening of March 17 contains 16 Georgia girls and other states represented will be North and South Carolina, Florida and Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, Tennessee and Kentucky, Texas, Indiana and Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin, and even far away Utah.

Winifred Bird, Leila Elder and Mary Pope Reed are Atlanta girls; Gene Wise is from Fort Valley, Katherine Wilkins from Dawson, Lydia Rose from Valdosta, Mattie Mae Mitchell from Swainsboro, Chas. Miller from Waycross, Rosalind Hightower from Gainesville, Sara Gray from Rome, Blanche Gaffney from Columbus, Frances Gosselin from Dublin, Aline Dickerson from Homerville, Dorothy Case from Fitzgerald, and Carolyn Allen from Calhoun, Ga.

From other states come Mary Lou Bell, Bene Boltin, Ethel Boyd Beck, Helen Brown, Mary Lee Chapman, Willa Chapline, Ethel Groth, Edith Thompson, Jennie Hanson, Aris Hood, Mary Jane Huddleston, Iris Landrum, Catherine McQuay, Annabelle Murphy, Frances Orr, Bettie Ross, Margaret Sentelle, Elizabeth Smith, Virginia Smith, Kathleen Sutton, Helen Torrence, Emma Trumbull, Adie Welch and Josephine Woolard.

The episodes which will make up the program have as widely varying origin as the bright young performers and the music ranges from Juliet's waltz song through such lighter bits as "I Love You So" from the Merry Widow, "My Hero" from the Clotelite Soldier, "My Sweet Little Alice Blue Gown" from Irene to the pep of "Carolina in the Morning" and the newness of the songs loaned the Brenau Glee club by the Mimes of the University of Michigan. These Michigan songs and scenes are given by the permission of their creators, Edwin R. Meiss and Myronne Chon and are taken from the prize winning play "In and Out," recently produced at the University of Michigan.

The follies is planned to banish seriousness for a few hours and those who witnessed the premiere performance at Brenau college on Friday pronounced it completely successful. Directed by Willford Waters and Miss Ethel Bowers and having a cast picked from Brenau's cleverest and prettiest girls, the entertainment is warranted to satisfy the most exacting critic, and to be replete with fun and brightness and the joyousness of unspoiled youth. Costuming has been carefully thought out and every episode will be a vision of loveliness produced by artistic combinations of color and pleasing variety of design.

The Brenau Busters lead off in the costume competition, for their apparel will be quite in the height of fashion and just as easily heard coming. In the fashion show the last word in style will be revealed and the Charming girls will manage to outdo the handiwork of their own hands. The flower garden girls will be a riot of color, and the little "Dutch Cleanser" will be a pony ballet clothed in most sedate style.

An evening of wholesome, girlish merriment will sustain the reputation for charm left by the Brenau follies of former years, and the event is being looked forward to with interest by a large number of Atlanta people. The Brenau alumni of Atlanta will all be at the performance and the friends of the performers will be out in full force.

The follies will, in addition to furnishing an evening of enjoyment, donate the proceeds of the show to the building fund with which a little hospital is being added to the Home for Old Ladies in West End. Tickets are on sale at the box office of the Atlanta theater.

BEAUTY CHATS BY EDNA K. FORBES
WELL PROTECTED HANDS.
Housewives write to me and say they simply cannot keep their hands good looking. They can, though, of course, they are not apt to attain that delicate, smooth, and supple skin of a woman of leisure. They have everything against them, particularly the women who do all their own work, and yet they can, if they choose, possess hands that show little or no trace of domestic work.

The first, and in my opinion the most important measure is a preventive one. The housewife need not rub her dishes three times a day, scrub her hands with soap and water, and pile the dinner things neatly, shut her kitchen door upon them.

The beautifully appointed luncheon table was overlaid by a lace cover and had as a centerpiece a silver basket filled with jonquils and daffodils. Surrounding this were silver candlesticks holding unshaded yellow tapers.

The guests included eight close friends of the honor guest.

ing the working part of the day, they are at least protected to make their beautifying an easier task.

Joseph Habersham D. A. R.'s Honor Mrs. William L. Peel

The Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R., held a memorial meeting for Mrs. William Lawson Peel, Thursday afternoon, in the chapter house on Lafayette Drive, which was attended by hundreds of women representing the most important social, philanthropic, patriotic and civic organizations in the city.

The flag, flying at half mast over the building, expressed the solemn importance of the event and the eloquent tributes paid to Mrs. Peel, who was the founder of the Joseph Habersham chapter, and its honorary regent, were sincere and beautiful.

Mrs. Christian Clarke, the regent of the chapter, presided at the meeting, and the memorial exercises were arranged by Mrs. Warren D. White, chairman of the memorial committee, and Mrs. W. D. Dykes, co-chairman, and both former regents of the chapter.

The Atlanta chapter, D. A. R., meeting nearby in Carnegie house, closed their exercises and adjourned in a body to the chapter house, to participate in the exercises of the distinguished Atlanta woman, who has passed on.

The organizations invited to participate in the exercises and which were present were:

The Pioneer Women, Atlanta chapter, D. A. R.; DeKalb chapter, D. A. R.; Agnes Lee chapter, U. D. C.; Atlanta chapter, U. D. C.; Colonial Dames, Founders and Patriots, Fulton chapter, U. D. C.; Daughters of 1812, the Ladies' Memorial association, and family of Mrs. Peel and all of her friends.

Tribute From Mrs. Minor.
Mrs. Warren White introduced the speakers, the first of whom was Mrs. Howard McCall, national vice president general, who read a tribute from Mrs. George Mary Minor, of Connecticut, national president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, in which she emphasized the monumental achievement of Mrs. Peel in collecting the names of the real Daughters of the Revolution of whom more than 100 were still living when the D. A. R. was organized.

Mrs. McCall stated that Mrs. Minor had invited her to pay this tribute to Mrs. Peel Tuesday in Washington, D. C., when a memorial service will be held at national headquarters for the members deceased during the year. She has accepted this invitation.

Mrs. John A. Perdue, who followed, paid a tribute to Mrs. Peel as "the first woman citizen."

Mrs. W. S. Coleman spoke on Mrs. Peel's educational influence. She said:

"It is difficult to magnify any special qualities of this many-sided woman, but the general public knew little of her real interest in matters of education, her interest in the former home of the Peels at Peachtree and Merritts avenue, and it was in these rooms that the first kindergarten was established."

Helped Boys and Girls.
"She gave money for the maintenance of deserving boys and girls of various schools in Georgia, no one outside her family knowing of these benefactions."

"This was pointedly emphasized during grand opera, when many young men and women of talent were brought into contact with the celebrities at these musical festivals and her liberality quietly furnished them with means for these opportunities which otherwise would have been unobtainable for these worthy lovers of music."

"Among her many beneficiaries was the support in France of six orphans of the world war, and her letters to these foreign proteges were modes of helpful inspiration and encouragement."

"Mrs. Peel organized the order of Robert E. Lee, and as state chairman of the colonial committee at the Cotton States exposition, she secured ten thousands dollars for a special building from New York and Massachusetts to have the historic exhibit of the Colonial Dames and Daughters of the American Revolution."

Magical Beautifiers For Women
Women everywhere are trying all kinds of beautifiers, only to find that their effects are transitory. The first requisite of beauty is health. With it, the dark lines, eyes are lusterless, steps circle, appear beneath them, the complexion becomes sallow, and almost invariably the underlying cause is some ailment peculiar to women. There is a very inexpensive remedy for this condition in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for nearly fifty years has been relieving women from some of the worst forms of female trouble. It not only restores health and beauty and the joys of living?—(adv.)

What Women Wear

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE

Egypt Influences Women to Wear Black Garments With Vivid Horizontal Stripes and Cotton Crepe and Silk Jersey in Such Coloring Are Turned Into Overblouses and One-piece Frocks, Particularly the Former. Embroidery Sometimes Serves as a Substitute for Printed Stripes.

Women again have a chance to wear black. But not demure black. This new thing that has come into fashion is as colorful as a mummy. Of course, it is taken from Egypt. We shall not come from under the yoke of that country for a year or two, to judge by the rush for patented names to be given to fabrics, jewelry, handbags and other details of women's apparel.

The Egyptians used much black. But they used it as a foundation for brilliant colors. Their temples, chariots, effigies, costume, saw the significance of black as a color on which to build. They used it with beaten gold and silver for jewelry; so will we under the new spell of the Nile. They used it for clothes. So will we. Black cotton frocks with horizontal stripes in color with small animals between the stripes are frocks of importance. Black jersey blouses with stripes going around the figure have been quickly accepted for sports and adjuncts to tailored suits.

There is no doubt that a mingling of Puritan Victorianism and pagan Egyptian will come to pass. We are to wear basques, immense ribbon sashes tied in front, others that form a bustle at the point of the basque in back, ruffled skirts with fringe at the edge of each flounce. Against this fashion we will wear horizontal stripes, narrow skirts, straight-line frocks, square short sleeves, gorgeous tunics and fine pleating. It promises to be a gay and resourceful season. A red lantern should be hung before horizontal stripes. There is danger in every inch of their length. The living skeleton can wear them, but no woman who is stout and forty should even look at the counter where they are displayed. The majority are thin, and as the majority appear to be young, the horizontal stripe will have its day. It is wonderful as a bit of decoration, it is good as a waistcoat, it serves admirably as a girder or as a circular finish; a short tight sleeve. As a frock or a blouse it has possibilities of evil.

Silk overblouse with Egyptian stripes. Horizontal, in bright colors, against a black ground. The belt fastens in front with several wide loops.

The Value of an Oriental Rug is not measured alone by dollars and cents. It is so intimate a thing, priceless for the personal equation involved!

Every knot has been tied by human hands, laboriously, one at a time. As the weaver toiled, day after day, his inner dreams took shape beneath his hands. The growing colors crept in and out, obedient to his fancy, and unconsciously, perhaps, he patterned the web to accord with his daily measure of laughter and tears.

The rugs we offer are beautiful, with the beauty of colors justly proportioned. It is this that makes us handle them almost with reverence. We feel that their loveliness is a reincarnation, the picture of some far-away artist's soul.

Utility Versus Beauty?

Both in an Oriental Rug

Here, in hand-woven rugs from the Orient, we offer an example of the union of loveliness and service.

These rugs will appeal at once to your eye—you have but to see them. The blending of colors is deliciously satisfying, as the taste of a spice-bearing drink from the ancient East. First a sharp smack of crimson, a tang of salmon with brown, and a whiff of mauve and blue.

And for utility—an Oriental rug will wear and not be "worn" for a very many years. It would be practical merely as a floor covering, a shock absorber.

To lovers of beauty, who withal know the art of common sense—these rugs will appeal for their two-fold excellence.

Spring-time Styles

in

Wraps, Coats and Suits

As the season advances into spring, the modes acquire additional charm and beauty of design and coloring.

Truly, so much that is delightfully new and different has never before been shown in wrap or coat and suit.

—And, too, at prices that are as surprisingly modest as the modes are pleasing and different. One may buy now with confidence. The season's styles are at the height of development, and all that is best and correct is assembled here for your convenience.

You are cordially invited to enjoy the unusual display. It is our pleasure to show and, if may be, to help in suitable selection.

Coats and Capes and Wrappy Cape-Coats

The showing of new models is varied quite beyond describing. Truly each seems more charming than the last as they are brought forth for inspection!

The Colors are indeed delightful! The new Grey-stone is a most pleasing shade and the new tans and browns—pleasant, cocoa, Porto Rico and several others. Then the new blue, carmel, and no end of stunning things in navy blues and blacks.

The Materials embrace all the soft pile fabrics, Tarquina, Melrosa, Formosa, Kashmerette and others. And there are beautiful silk fabrics of light or medium weight. Poiret Twills, Twill-cords, Piquette and Roshanara crepes are employed and many handsome combinations with matelasse and embroideries.

Unusual Trimmings are seen in self fabrics—wide cuffs and collars formed of woven bands and quilted effects.

Some have collars of the beautiful summer ermine, caracul, or grey squirrel.

Rows of petal trimmings in self material are used, while some are very richly embroidered and ornamented with fringe and large buckles or clasps.

The Models are in medium or long flowing capes, the graceful wrap-around coats, straight or blouse coats, and many wrappy cape-coat effects.

Attractive Capes Are Priced $25.00

Most unusual at such a modest price is this group of capes in Poiret Twill, Petronia, Andre Superior and Veldyne.

There are models in Hawaiian blue, navy, tans, browns, cocoa, caramel and blacks.

Trimmings of colorful embroidery, self tones, stitchings, elaborate braidings, tucks, bands, and picot tails or petals.

Very Smart Youthful Coats For Misses

Very new, very chic and youthful are wrap-around coats quite elaborately braided or all-over embroidered to the waist line—usually in beautiful contrasting shades such as tan or grey on blue, black or grey and other striking combinations. Self collars or perhaps caracul may be used. There are several more models equally pleasing in design, having an especial appeal to the miss and youthful matron.

The New Suits Two and Three-Piece Models

Beautiful are the new materials of Cordine, Shanteen, Piquette, Covert Twill, Twillcord Paye and other fabrics in Tweed-like sports materials.

The Colors, besides many smart models in black and navy, are the very popular greys and new shades of brown and tans.

In Three-Piece Suits are shown the most pleasing color combinations—black and grey, navy and grey, tan and brown, and others.

Fancy Coats are elaborately braided all over in self or contrasting color—some with silver or gilt threads. Very attractive are others in quite new headed designs of beautiful colorings.

Separate Blouses are an unusual feature with many of the three-piece suits—beautiful over-blouses of crepe in solid or fancy designs very smartly fashioned and often with a long girdle. These, of course, may be worn without the coat—making really two costumes of one.

Two-Piece Suits are shown with the smartest of plainly tailored coats or with the pretty braided coats. Models are plain, full back straight lines, or with the blouse back, caught at a low waist line with some quaint ornament or buckle.

Sports Suits in the lighter shades are shown in Kasha cloth and many pretty weaves in the Tweed effects—quite plain or with charming wool embroideries.

The new Capes are shown at prices from $25.00 to $ 75.00
The Coats and Cape-Coats at prices from $49.50 to $145.00
Suits are shown at $49.50, $58.50, $68.50 and up to $125.00
